AMERICAN DEFENSE SOCIETY NOT AIDING RADICAL DEFENSE

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., April 18.—The name of the American Defense society was unintentionally brought into the trial of William Z. Foster, charged with criminal syndicalism, as one of the organizations supposed to be supporting him, it was disclosed today on examination of the stenographic record of the Foster trial.

Charles N. Gore, prosecuting attorney for Berrian county, who was questioning prospective jurors about a letter mailed to Berrian voters from the American Civil Liberties union and Labor Defense council inadvertently used the name of the American Defense society instead of that of the labor organization.

The American Defense society is a national society of which President Roosevelt was one of the leaders. The Labor Defense council was created by liberal and radical leaders after the arrest of Foster and other communists to raise money to defend them.
