COL. BUNCO BULL SPITS HIS FINAL WORD TO VOTERS

Yesterday a M. T. reporter bumped into Col. Bull at Jensen's cigar store on West Main. The colonel had just bought a pound of Battle Ax chewing tobacco preparatory to leaving for his ranch at Buncom and was in a reminiscent mood. He said: "Do you know I have never found anything that could match the old Tar Heal chewin tobacco of fifty and sixty years ago? Tar Heal was the brand issued to us when I was in Price's army. I remember when Jim Lane and Jennison's Red Legs chased us out of Missouri we had to beat it so fast that our commissary went on the blink and for two weeks the boys were without spitten tobacco. It was suddenly something terrible, sub. The boys had to take to chewin sassafras bark—we never got a good satisfien chew until we got into the rough mountain country of northern Arkansas when the Jayhawkers gave up the chase."

"Now, son, I have paid all cigar and moonshine bills—closed headquarters and am leaving for home—but before I leave I am going to ask you to print something for me.—Tell the voters of the Chamber of Commerce to not vote for a single man on any ticket unless he pledges himself to put out a Medford booklet and do it this year. These gents, on the Craters' and Business Men's tickets are dodging and sidestepping this issue right now. Every one of them must be called down hard and if he stutters or hems and haws mark him off the list. The Andy Gump ticket is pledged to this great work and "is rarin' to go."
