DECIDE TO DELAY
CANCELLATION OF J'VILLE FRANCHISE

The city council last night did not pass the ordinance to cancel the franchise of the Medford-Jacksonville railroad, having decided after much discussion to move carefully and slowly, adhering closely to the legal aspects of the situation.

This action was finally decided on out of courtesy to W. S. Barnum, former owner of the railroad and holder of the mortgage on it, who wrote two weeks ago that he would be home by May 1 and would then at once take up the matter of the lack of repairs complained of. The council was also influenced not to act at once because the railroad management has been busy all week repairing the holes between the tracks on Main street.

The mayor and council, however, are determined to bring the road's management to time and make it walk chalk in the future. It is the present plan of the city officials to arrange a conference between them and Mr. Barnum, J. S. Gagnon, present owner, and J. W. Opp, present lessee from Gagnon, and reach an amicable agreement by which the city would declare the franchise forfeited and issue a new franchise, which would require the railroad to file a $1000 or more bond with the city to guarantee to keep the road in repair in the future. The road's franchise is in two sections, the older section having run 32 years, and the other one, the Main street section, for several years.

It was a busy night for the council, mayor and city attorney, as in addition to passing the city planning commission zone ordinance a number of other ordinances relating to delinquent properties and segregation of properties were passed, and proposed ordinances to come up in the near future were discussed. A number of appointments were acted on, and much routine business was transacted.

These two have met twice before. The last time Gustavo put Hand out of commission by cracking a couple of his ribs. Ad was a little heavy then. He has promised he will try to get down to 165 pounds, and the two should tip the scales pretty even. Winner will take all of the gate receipts.—(Eugene Guard). SERENADERS SCORE
HIT AT NAT DANCE

Five hundred persons danced to the unusual music and song of the Serenaders at the Oriental Gardens last night. Each of the nine members of the aggregation proved himself a thorough artist and it is the unquestioned belief of all that better music is impossible.

All of the players are boys and it is in youth that dance music finds its best expression. Glenn Oswald, manager of the orchestra, has surely solved the problem of maintaining enthusiasm and not for a moment did the evening "drag."

The Serenaders will appear again for the last time tonight and many novel and interesting musical feats will make this a never-to-be-forgotten night in dance annals of the valley.

S. P. OFFICIALS
HERE TO DISCUSS
GRADE CROSSINGS

E. L. King, superintendent of the Southern Pacific railroad, and Ben Dey, attorney for the same, arrived here from Portland this morning and were met at the depot by Mayor Gaddis and Councilmen Butler, Paul, Alenderfer, Close, Jacobs and Butler and City Superintendent Davis and City Attorney John H. Carlin.

The railroad officers and the city officials lost no time in delving into the improvements asked for by the city of the railroad, including the establishment of a subway at 6th street and certain track changes to the end that the crossing delay caused by freight trains would practically be done away with, and the city's appearance along the right of way would be much improved.

The day was spent in discussion and looking over the suggested changes and the local railroad situation generally. The outcome of this conference will probably not be known until tonight, when Messrs. King and Dey will leave for Portland.

First thing after his arrival here this morning Superintendent King explained that important changes decided on by the railroad management for Medford months ago would be put into effect any day now, as soon as the board of directors of the Southern Pacific had approved the recommendation of the officials. These changes which it is claimed would reduce the crossing delay in the city to a minimum, are independent of the track changes being made now in the depot and yard.

They include the building of a freight side track in the yards north of the passenger depot to Jackson street, which would accommodate 75 to 80 cars, and another similar track south from the south end of the yards to accommodate the same number of cars. The water tank will be removed from its present location to a site in the neighborhood of Jackson street.

These changes would leave only the switch engine and one or two cars to pass through the yards at various times day and night, and the freight trains arriving from north and south would do all their stopping and cutting out of cars on the tracks at the north and south ends of the yards. Hence the freight trains from both directions would pass through the heart of the city over the crossings at good speed, each passing in from one to one and a half minutes, it is said.
