"Children of Jazz," Hialto
"Children of Jazz," featuring Theodore Kossloff, Ricardo Cortez, Robert Cain and Ellen Percy, was given a most successful premier at the Pago theatre yesterday.
The story tells of a modern, jazz-erized girl and her quest for excitement. Although a comedy of the first water, this picture has many thrilling moments, among them a hydroplane wreck and scenes on a schooner manned by a number of disreputable adventurers.
This is a production with a great cast and with scenes and beautiful sets.
Besides the Mack Sennett comedy, and Hodge Podge film presents Betty Brown in a novel musical setting of the latest in musical synecopation.

"The Law of the Lawless," Page
"The Law of the Lawless," which serves as a starring vehicle for Dorothy Dalton and which marks the American debut of the French screen star, Charles de Roche, is a romantic screen story of the gypsy and Tartar tribes of the Dobrudja, a district of southeastern Roumania. This production was the feature on the bill at the Rialto theatre yesterday and proved highly satisfactory.

The setting of this story is unusual and picturesque, depicting the plamor and romance of gypsy life. There are two scenes of intense excitement: the arrival of Costa, the gypsy chief, just as Sahande is to be sold on the auction block and the fight between the Tartars and the gypsies for the possession of Sahande.
