The Reddy Co. is now in business in its new location at the southwest corner of Main and South Central avenue, having moved its immense jewelry stock from the old location on the opposite corner between the close of business Saturday night and early this morning. The management is disappointed in that the work about the new location is not yet completed and the fine mahogany fixtures and some other equipment are not yet ready, as expected. The formal opening of the new store, which has been christened the Tiffany Jewelry place of southern Oregon, will take place some time later, probably the first of December.

A salmon measuring 5 feet in length and nearly three feet in circumference and weighing 80 pounds, was landed by R. G. McKenzie of Elk River, north of Port Orford, last Friday. This is said to be the largest salmon ever caught on the southwest coast of Oregon. Mr. McKenzie, whose ranch is on Elk River near the mouth, caught 100 salmon, their aggregate weight was around 3500 pounds, in two settings of the net. Two other large salmon, weighing between 50 and 60 pounds each, were caught near the mouth of Sixes river by H. M. Astell of Port Orford recently.

"According to an opinion handed down yesterday by Circuit Judge C. M. Thomas the contract of the City of Ashland with the Talent Irrigation District respecting the purchase of 600 acre feet of water was sustained in all particulars," says the Ashland Tidings. "Believing that the closing of a contract with the Talent Irrigation District for 600 acre feet of water will solve the shortage that prevails during the dry months of the year at a cost of only $5,000, the city and district prepared a contract and to determine its legality submitted it to Judge Thomas. His decision is heralded by proponents of the project as an important step in the development of Ashland, not only, but to a large area of farming land."
