

REPORT BRYAN AND WILSON TO OPPOSE M'ADOO NOMINATION

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 14.—Every four years Washington indulges in the pastime of predicting who will be chief executive of the nation. In the early part of the season there was some speculation as to who would be the standard bearer of the republican party. Today those skilled in political prognostications are, in the main, of the opinion that Calvin Coolidge will be nominated on the first ballot. The entry list of favorite sons for the republican nomination has been far less in number this year than ever before, so the "wise ones" in political prophecy have now turned their attention to the chances of this or that candidate for the democratic nomination.

The predictions run about as follows: McAdoo cannot get two-thirds of the convention vote because, being the son-in-law of Woodrow Wilson, the public would be of the opinion that he would, indirectly if not directly, be for the League of Nations, which, as all will remember, was cast into the discard in no uncertain terms. Some say that Wilson will not support McAdoo and that Bryan holds the same thought.

Those who favor Raister of Indiana are forced to combat the criticism that he is too old and that he does not subscribe to the views of the more radical wing of his party. Underwood of Alabama, for whom everyone has a good word, is not thought to be entirely persona grata with the Peerless One; besides, many are of the opinion that the time has not yet come when a candidate from the south can win. Senator Copeland of New York is being groomed as a dark horse, but the leaders are not certain they can handle him.

Another dark horse is David F. Houston of North Carolina, who was formerly secretary of agriculture and later secretary of treasury under Wilson. Robinson of Arkansas, democratic leader in the senate, has a quiet little boom that is being nursed by his friends. Dill of Washington has been spoken of, by some, but many voice the objection that he is too young. John W. Davis of West Virginia, formerly Ambassador to Great Britain and a candidate for the democratic nomination in 1920, is also among the probable candidates.

Politicians here are waiting with great interest the statement that "Jimmie Cox," who ran against Harding in 1920, is expected to deliver within a short time. The lately elected Governor of Kentucky has some warm supporters, as well as his own political machine. This democratic political leader of Illinois has not told just what happened when Tom Taggart, democratic boss of Indiana, Charlie Murphy of Tammany Hall and he met at French Lick Springs, and it is not likely he will give out any stenographic report of what occurred at that time.

James Hamilton Lewis, of pink whisker fame, is spoken of by some. Word has been received here that William Jennings Bryan, thrice a candidate for the presidency, would not object—that is, very strenuously—to again being called to lead the Democratic hosts. Rumor also has it that if William Jennings is not struck by the political lightning at the democratic convention, he will see if he cannot put over brother Charlie, who is now governor of Nebraska. There are many in Washington who believe Woodrow Wilson will play an important part in the democratic convention. At present he is "sitting tight and sawing wood." Those who enjoy his confidence say that he is watching every move that is made on the political chess board.

All these prophecies and predictions are met with smiling countenances by the republicans, who quote Henry Ford by saying: "Why Change?"

Ambassador Kellogg Received. LONDON, Jan. 14.—(By the Associated Press)—Frank B. Kellogg, the new American ambassador, presented his credentials to King George in Buckingham palace today.

Grain Exports Increase. WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—Grain exports from the United States last week amounted to 2,320,000 bushels, compared with 1,330,000 bushels the week before.

SAN FRANCISCO OFFERS $200,000 FOR CONVENTION

WASHINGTON, Jan. 14.—A panorama of presidential prospects has been prepared for the democratic national committee which meets here tomorrow to select a convention city and transact other business. Friends of William G. McAdoo, Senator Underwood of Alabama, Governor Smith of New York; John W. Davis of West Virginia; Dr. A. A. Murphy of Gainesville, Fla., and other potential contestants for the nomination are vigorously presenting the claims of their candidates.

Selection of the convention city is expected to be sharply contested with the supporters of various candidates jockeying for geographical advantage and with financial offers from the contending cities admittedly an important item in view of the committee treasury's deficit of about $180,000.

Bids from six cities are ready for consideration, but the contest is thought to center among New York, Chicago and St. Louis. San Francisco and Louisville, however, are expected to present strong inducements.

Ledore B. Dockweiler, California national committee member, declared that San Francisco would present a certified check for $200,000 for the convention and in addition would provide use of its municipal auditorium, where the 1920 meetings were held.

"With such an offer as this, we fully expect to be successful," said Mr. Dockweiler.

SEC'Y. WALLACE TO SPEAK IN OMAHA

OMAHA, Neb., Jan. 14.—Every state west of the Mississippi river is expected to be represented at the 27th annual convention of the National Livestock association, which opens tomorrow, delegates to which began arriving yesterday.

The convention is expected to express its attitude toward that section of the Esch-Cummings railroad law, which undertakes to insure the railroads a reasonable return on their investments. Present railroad rates on livestock are to be discussed. Among speakers will be Secretary of Agriculture, Henry C. Wallace.

Preliminary to the opening session, the organization's finance and executive committees were to meet today.

PHILADELPHIA RETURNS TO NORMAL CONDITION

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 14.—The campaign of Brigadier General Smedley B. Butler, Philadelphia's new director of public safety, for the elimination of vice, had a marked effect on the week-end on crime of all sorts. Not one holdup or robbery Saturday or Sunday occurred. Arrests were fewer than on any other week end since the advent of prohibition. Saloons were closed tight and the tenderloin was unusually quiet.

City hall experienced its dustiest Sunday in years.

BABE RUTH FARMING, HOPES TO BAT OUT NEW HOMER RECORD

SUDBURY, Mass., Jan. 14.—(By the Associated Press)—Babe Ruth, who bats out home runs in the summer months, plays gentleman farmer on his Sudbury estate all winter, but not because he likes it. Ruth, busy at building a henhouse one mild January day, suspended operations long enough to say that farming with him is just an incident in the serious business of baseball. The axe, hammer and saw and shovel which are Ruth's winter-time toys, are no more than instruments of training for the mighty bat that is expected to propel home runs in mid-July.

"That's the idea," said Babe, "a guy's got to keep right at it." Impelled by an ambition and a dread, Ruth performs much hard work on his farm of 140 acres. The ambition is to outstrip all past records in long distance batting in the 1924 season. The dread is that winter may put on the Babe's great frame many pounds of weight which he will be compelled to train away in the early season.

Ruth said he had too much reducing to do last spring, that the process sapped his strength and that he lost time at the opening of the season which told on his 1923 performance. Nothing of that kind is to occur this year, the Babe says, and he claims that he has added little, if any, to his poundage of the 1923 world series. He made one trip to New York this winter. It was to ask and receive permission from Colonel Ruppert, owner of the Yankees, to go to Hot Springs, Ark., early in February for the "boiling out" process.

NEW YORK FIGHTER DIES FROM BLOW IN BATTLE WITH TAYLOR

NEW YORK, Jan. 14.—An autopsy has been ordered to determine whether the death last night of Frankie Jerome, bantamweight boxer, was due to a blow received during a bout with Bud Taylor of Terre Haute, Ind., on Friday last at Madison Square Garden. If this proves to be the case, official state action will be taken immediately against Taylor. Death followed an operation which failed to relieve a cerebral hemorrhage.

Jerome, whose real name was Frank Daugherty, is the third New York boxer to die from injuries received in the ring since the Walker law legalized the sport in 1920. If he actually succumbed as a result of Taylor's blows. The first was Frankie Pletcher, who died in 1922 and the second Andy Thomas who succumbed early last year. Neither was as well known as Jerome, who was a contender for the world's title held by Joe Lynch.

Threats of legislative action against the sport have been heard since wide discussion began a month ago of poor decisions. An investigation of Jerome's condition before the fight is expected, particularly as he had been fighting often and it was apparent when his bout with Taylor began that he was not in his usual strength. Tex Rickard, who promoted the fight, said Jerome was in good condition when he entered the ring.

MILLER CHALLENGES THYE FOR TITLE

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 14.—Walter Miller, Los Angeles, former claimant to the world's middleweight wrestling champion, has challenged Ted Thye of Portland to a match to be held in Los Angeles or Portland, and has posted a forfeit of $250 with a Los Angeles newspaper, according to an announcement made by Miller. Miller suffered defeat in a match with Thye last spring and is anxious for a return bout before departing for Australia February 5, where he is to appear in a series of matches. Miller says that he is willing to meet Thye on the basis of winner take all for a side bet of $500.

EAGLE POINT EAGLETS

By A. C. Howlett
Before I commence to write my letter for the Medford Mail Tribune this Thursday afternoon I wish to correct a very serious mistake that occurred in my letter that was published Wednesday afternoon to which my attention was called by one of the readers of the Eaglelets as I was going to the postoffice this morning. In referring to our delightful climate that we have ordinarily I made mention of the difference between the climate here and in other parts of the country and referred to our very temperate zone and aimed to say that the coldest weather we had here so far this winter was nine above zero but the printer made me say that the coldest time we had this winter was nine degrees below zero, making our Italy about as frigid as it is in Chicago or New York, and as my critic suggested I cheerfully make the correction, for if the climate was that severe I would not be here writing the Eaglelets (but would be hunting a warmer climate). I hope the above correction will be noticed and I will try to be more careful in the future.

Bird Brophy and Horace Goppert, the latter of Butte Falls were business callers in our town Saturday.

George Lewis, one of our progressive citizens was called to Portland as a witness in the federal court, and expects to be gone for some time.

Binger Herman, Jr., was here trading with F. J. McPherson and so was Dick Johnson and Earl Matthews.

Mrs. J. L. Case has gone to Albany, Ore., to visit her parents and her husband and Jack Ledgerwood took their meals at the Sunnyside for a few days before they went up to Butte Falls on the logging train, to go to work in the timber camp.

Claus Charley came in and spent Saturday night.

W. W. Picknor of Philadelphia came in on the stage Saturday and engaged a room for a few days, leaving here Wednesday morning at 7:15. He was very reticent and no one seemed to know where he was going or anything about his business.

John Greb, one of our prominent orchardists, was here Monday.

There were two men came in from Central Point and asked the privilege of hanging one of their calendars advertising a life insurance company, and about the time that I asked them to register their names supper was announced and one of them took my book to write their names but they were so scribbled that I couldn't make them out, but their calendar is very nice, the picture of a mammoth redwood tree supposed to be 3000 years old and what developments have been made in that time.

Mr. Sherman and E. V. Peterson, the two men who had the contract to carry the mail from here to Portland before Luke took the job, were here Monday night and Tuesday morning Mr. Sherman went to Medford on business and after returning both went up home. C. H. Natwick also spent the night with us and two strangers were also here for dinner the same day.

The hostess of the Sunnyside and her two daughters, and Jud Edsall who started from here with her, after going to Portland, and surprising our daughter and family there by coming in unannounced Christmas eve and spending a few days in Portland and vicinity started on another trip up into Washington to surprise another daughter, taking our daughter from Portland with them, making another and three daughters, and Jud Edsall, he being the chauffeur, starting on a 440 mile drive in the very latter part of December, quite an undertaking for an old lady on the verge of her seventy-sixth birthday. (The next), but they report having but little snow and fine roads so on they went, reaching Pendleton for the night and taking an early start for Four Lakes on they went, and when they reached there they were directed how to go up to the house, three-quarters of a mile away up a very steep and slippery hill with about four inches of snow and the east wind blowing a 23 mile an hour gale, but when they were about over the hill, in passing thru a cut near the summit they found the drifted snow so deep in the cut that they could go no farther, so Jud and the daughter from Portland, Mrs. Grant Shaw started for the house and they were not certain if it was the right one but went in and saw her mother's picture on the wall, so introduced herself to her sister and told of their trouble and soon Mr. Lewis had a span of large strong horses harnessed and on the way to the car, and soon it was safely landed at the house and the rejoicing commenced and Sarah, (Mrs. Lewis) commenced to jump around and clap her hands for she was almost wild with joy at meeting her mother and three sisters at her own home in that far off cold, for the thermometer registered four below zero.

The next day was spent in thawing out the oil so the machine could run and taking it to a garage in Cheney where it could be kept warm. They have the garages heated there, and the next day was spent in visiting Spokane and taking in the sights, and after spending a few days with our children on their farm they started on the back track. I should have said that at Spokane the cold registered 19 degrees below zero. A lovely climate compared with Jackson county, Oregon!
