

MEDFORD TOLD TO PREPARE FOR TOURIST CROP

Outstanding among the many pleasant features of the well-attended Chamber of Commerce forum dinner last night at the Hotel Medford, marking the 200 continuous weekly forum meetings were the addresses of A. S. Dudley, manager of the state chamber of commerce; John Douglas, chairman of the Portland chamber of commerce forum and C. E. Gates, who told of the features of the home building campaign, which the Chamber of Commerce, in cooperation with the city government is to put on, to sell the 70 lots on paved streets still in the hands of the city, the sale to start March 5.

The dinner was remarkable in that while it was filled with enjoyment, good addresses enlightening the audience with facts about the prosperity of southern Oregon and the state, the wonderful coming influx of tourists this year and the need of ample housing preparations to welcome the 100,000 of them who will probably desire to locate in Oregon, the banquet was over at 9:15 p. m., having begun at 7 p. m. B. E. Harder, president of the chamber, presided.

Interpersed with the speeches were selections by Alford's orchestra and a much appreciated surprise was the appearance of the Medford Choral society, which came to the gathering from their rehearsal to sing several operatic selections, with Ed Andrews leading in a solo part.

The Tourist Preparations. E. S. Dudley in his address gave some striking statistics as to Oregon's resources, and past and coming tourist travel and predicted a great influx of people from all over the United States to this state seeking new locations in response to the immense advertising campaign being inaugurated.

He said the coast railroads, state chambers of commerce, various cities and towns of the Pacific coast, including the $200,000 to be spent for this purpose by the Oregon state chamber, altogether would spend five millions of dollars this year in advertising the Pacific coast section. He pointed out that last year 450,000 tourists passed through Oregon by auto and train, and left 15 millions of dollars in the state, the average stay in the state being five days and the average expenditure $8 a day while in the state.

Due to the increased volume of advertising Mr. Dudley declared that all the tourist authorities estimated that 2 1/2 times as many tourists would visit Oregon this year, and of this great horde of money spenders at least 100,000 would desire to look around with a view to locating in the state permanently.

"Therefore the cities and towns, and state generally, must prepare to welcome them and amply house them while looking around," the speaker said. "Most will want to stay in a locality that strikes their fancy for a few weeks or months, while they leisurely size up the community, its people, business and property features."

Mr. Dudley told that in the name of the state chamber he had called together the advertising and passenger traffic managers of 22 of the country's prominent railroads to attend an all day meeting and luncheon at the La Salle hotel in Chicago, on March 12, at which time they will be enlightened as to Oregon's resources, scenery and opportunities. At this gathering the state chamber will show 10,000 feet of film showing these features.

Publicity for Medford. He also told that the state chamber is issuing 50,000 copies—just a starter, and many thousands more to follow—of a recreation folder of Oregon places of interest, which will be distributed by 800 auto clubs of the United States and through the railroads, and the 56 chambers of commerce in this state. Medford appears prominently in this folder in connection with being the gateway to Crater Lake.

It was also pointed out by Mr. Dudley that the residents of any state can find the counterpart of their own community in climate and conditions in some part of Oregon, no wonder is this state's climatic and other diversities.

"Seventy-one per cent of industry in Oregon is dependent on the lumber industry," he continued in dilating on the fact that the rainfall in Oregon is its greatest asset.

He stressed the fact that all crafts, industries, cities, towns and their people must pull together, as the success and prosperity of one community depends on the success of the others. The need of stabilizing business in the state was also emphasized.

Mirth and Seriousness. The address of John Douglas, which was full of humor and witicism was interspersed with some serious facts about the resources of Oregon. He was the chief speaker of the chamber at its 190th forum dinner, and last night expressed his pleasure at addressing the forum on this two hundredth anniversary occasion. Calling attention to the fact that this was Prune Week, he referred to himself as a prune from Portland. His good natured jabs at Medford and her people, and Portland also, and the other speakers, aroused much laughter.

During his address Mr. Douglas imparted one profound thought, which he would propound, that the banqueters could take home with them and that was "Lincoln and Washington were both born on national holidays." In his closing remarks he called Medford "the Pasadena of Oregon."

In the more serious part of his talk he declared that the resources of Oregon were almost unimaginable and told of the wonderful volume statistics of the port of Portland in wool and lumber, and said: "We look for the development of the state to develop the port of Portland."

BIG LINEN MILL MAY BE BUILT SALEM, OREGON

SALEM, Ore., Feb. 28.—Following a conference held here today between T. B. Kay, local woolen mill head and Colonel W. B. Bartram, linen and flax expert from Toronto, Canada, it was announced that a further conference will be held by the men Friday at Portland with W. D. B. Johnson, manager of the Portland chamber of commerce to discuss the possibilities of establishing a linen and flax mill at this point.

Just what Bartram has to offer was not made public and probably will not be until after the conference.

Efforts have been made here more or less spasmodically for the past several years to develop some sort of a linen mill to take care of the flax crop which so far has been handled entirely through the state penitentiary.

INSURGENTS ASK FOR REOPENING OF NEGRO JOB CASE

WASHINGTON, Feb. 28.—Behind the veil of official secrecy which cloaks the senate's executive business the fight over the nomination of Walter L. Cohen, Louisiana negro republican leader, to be controller of customs yesterday by a move for re-consideration of the secret vote which rejected him.

Charges and counter-charges of deals and trades, political and otherwise; the effect on the negro vote in the northern states and the membership of the Ku Klux Klan in others, figure in the unofficial reports of what is going on while senators decline to discuss "executive affairs."

Reconsideration of Cohen's nomination comes in a motion filed by Senator Shipstead of the farmer-labor senators from Minnesota after a conference with Senator LaFollette, head of the republican insurgent group. The nomination was rejected by almost solid lineup of democrats strengthened by insurgent republicans.

WOMAN AILING FOR A YEAR TOOK LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND—Happy Results

Newcastle, Pa.—"I was all run-down and everybody thought I was going into a decline. I had been ailing for a year with pains in my right side so that I could hardly stand on my feet. When I walked I felt as if something was falling. I was not able to do any work and had a nurse most of the time. She spoke to me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I gave it a fair trial. Some women think one bottle should cure them, but I did not stop at that. I took more and got better, and am able ever since to do my own housework. There was a time, when I would complain of not feeling well, that my husband would say, 'Go to the doctor.' But now he will tell me to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's, and it has always helped me. I have had druggists tell me that they had something better, but they don't tell me that now, for I take no other. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound now for five years. 'COVERED WAGON' RIALTO TOMORROW

"The Covered Wagon," which comes to the Rialto theatre Friday and Saturday, Feb. 29 and March 1st, two performances daily, was adapted from the late Emerson Hough's novel of the same name, by Jack Cunningham, a well known newspaper man. The screen version follows the book in almost every detail; which, in itself, is unusual in motion pictures.

Thousands of theatre goers who have seen the spectacle, are unanimous in declaring that the picture is unlike anything ever produced. It depicts with historical accuracy the brave-hearted men and women who first settled the Pacific northwest. There are more than 250 covered wagons in one string; as many as 200 are seen fording a mile-wide river; thousands of Indians attack the wagon train.

The love story of Molly Wingate and Will Banion is beautiful, but uncertain to the very end.

By Central Press. CHICAGO, Feb.—Agnes Lang, pretty and 17, was lonely.

She wanted a big, handsome knight to come riding into her dull and dreary life.

She bought a two-cent stamp and joined a matrimonial club.

The first man she wrote proposed on Sunday.

They were married on Monday.

Agnes was happy for a while—until she learned, she declares, that the husband, Ralph Mark, was married to six others.

By Central Press. NEW YORK, Feb.—There are several parts of the body that humans could dispense with to their advantage. One is the thymus gland.

A study completed by Dr. Oscar Riddle, of the Carnegie station for evolution at Cold Spring Harbor, N. Y., shows that humans have no use whatsoever for this gland nowadays.

Dr. Riddle explains that centuries ago, high animals and the human ancestors who the time, did have lived in water at the bottom of the sea. It gave forth creatures which surrounded the egg or unborn offspring, until it was strong enough for birth and to make its way in the world. It was of indispensable use to one of the remote ancestors who laid hard-shelled eggs.

In the evolution of the human body it was not eliminated as were other parts, so it persists today.

CITY LOT SALE BY C. OF C. WILL START MARCH 5

The Home Building Campaign of the Chamber of Commerce in cooperation with the city administration to sell 70 choice lots on paved streets, which were taken over by the city for unpaid assessments, was formally launched at the chamber's big forum dinner at the Hotel Medford last night, when C. E. Gates, chairman of the chamber's campaign committee announced some of the details of this campaign which will probably get going in earnest by next Monday. The lots are not to go on sale, however, until March 5.

It is planned to form the Chamber of Commerce members into various competing teams of salesmen under captains, and to make the sale short and snappy until the very last lot is sold. The sales office will be at the Chamber of Commerce building, under general charge of A. L. Hill, representing the city, and an attaché of the city treasurer's office will be stationed at the chamber during the campaign with the location plots of the various lots and other information that prospective buyers may want.

The lots will be sold on easy terms at the exact cost of the improvements made on them—about $100 down and six or seven years in which to pay the balance.

"Medford and all Southern Oregon is rapidly becoming enveloped in prosperity," said Mr. Gates in his outlining address last night. "The last year was the best financially that Medford ever had in its history, and last December was the best business month of that year."

Calling attention to the fact that Medford is undeveloped, Mr. Gates stated that the city is short at least 100 houses.

He also stated that in the last few months $150,000 has gone out of Medford in the purchase of foreign stocks, and made a plea for investment at home instead, in purchasing land and building homes.
