Rankin and the guards from Union creek and Huckleberry mountain have gone to fight the fire, and a number of fire fighters have also been sent.

The fire is located near Huckleberry mountain on an old burn where there was a big forest fire about six or eight years ago, and for that reason will be hard to handle. However, it is surrounded by good timber and every effort will be made to control it before this timber is reached.

FAIR AUTO SHOW SECOND ONLY TO RACES IN INTEREST

Of almost as much public interest as the horse races is the auto show at the fair. Housed in a mammoth tent are the latest models from the latest Ford to the luxuriously appointed sedans.

Speaking of the Ford, C. E. Gates has placed about every model from the Detroit factory including minia-ture tractors for the kiddies. The stately Lincoln is there as are the Fordson tractors with new sub-motors. At the booth are E. H. White, H. F. Pence and Ted Pihl.

Among higher priced models are the Cadillac and Chrysler, shown by the Buycor Motor Co. This display attracts much attention, as these cars are ever popular.

C. M. Pajce, agent for the car of similar name, might be the maker so enthusiastic he is. He also displays the Jewett, assisted by C. W. Hawkins. His show contains two sedans, enclosed besides of the motor world which will for much admiration, especially from the fair sex.

Charles Brown is in charge of the Star-Flint-Durant show of the Mason Motor Car Co. H. B. Mason arranged the showing of this trio of road buggies.

The Auto Supply store has an arrangement of new equipment, tires and so forth, which is almost as interesting as the cars themselves.

"Another" carload of Nashs arrived just in time for the Highway Motor Car company to drive them out for their display. F. R. Hora was worried until the cars arrived, as he had sold all models and did not have a car to show. The Nash is finished in the new Duco, a celluloid preparation "shot" on by gun, and which cannot be scratched or bumped. It is finished at high temperature and rubbed down with emery cloth.

Another model bearing this late finish is the Oakland from Patton & Robinson, Inc. They also offer the Chevrolet in diverse styles. Mr. Patton is on hand as are B. L. Sander-son, A. E. Hall and F. M. Pickett.

Mr. Patton is exhibiting "Man's Conquest of Time," a four reel film done mostly by Tony Sarg in cartoon, but amplified with scenes of Chevrolet from molten metal to rolling car. It is interesting and enlightening, being enjoyed by both old and young alike. Of special educational value are the first two reels, on the start of transportation, from earliest stone age.

"Of sound value" is the display of Dodge from the agency of Riley Meier Motor Co. D. H. Snow is in charge of the four attractive models of this popular machine.

If you do not understand precisely how the "innards" of a gas engine operate, just drop in at the Hupp Auto company's booth and Lester Lord, manager, will gladly illustrate by means of the "dissected" Hupp motor, operated by electricity. Mr. Lord is in charge of the booth, assisted by John Jewell, E. W. Lord and Frank Ireland. The new Hupps are finished in Duco, the indestructible paint.

This year more people, exclusive of campers, are sleeping in their cars on highway as well as in city. Showing the latest in "sleeping cars," is E. C. Knight of the Acme Motor Co. distributors of the Hudson-Essex line.

The new Essex coach, with bed made up invitingly, looks as if it had been built only as a bed-car, but in a jiffy Mr. Knight demonstrates how the front seats spring back and the rear cushions resume their places, hiding mattresses and bedding.

H. McCollough, horse carpenter at the new dam purchased this car early on the opening day, and will receive it Saturday night. The Hudson likewise can be turned into a double-bed-car. The show attracts considerable attention for this feature, in addition to the values found in this line of cars.

Three years ago Bolt Reynolds of Washington, Pa., bought a plowhorse at public auction for $7.50. Recently Reynolds, who is eighty years old, drove that plowhorse, which he named Bernor, to victory in the 2:20 trot at the 72nd annual Greene County Fair.

O. A. C. EXHIBIT AT FAIR GIVES FARMER POINTERS

The exhibit of the Oregon Agricultural college in the agricultural building is one of the most attractive and educational exhibits to be found at the fair.

The exhibit is in charge of U. S. Burt of the college extension service and covers 42 feet of wall-space. The following problems of interest are emphasized: Diseases of small fruits, inoculation of legums; selection of good dairy cows by means of cow testing associations, proper feed of dairy cows as a good cow is no better than a poor one unless she receives enough feed to make the additional production; soil fertility by the use of superphosphate for alfalfa, barn yard manure and growing of legumes to build up the soil; a picture of a good type of a manure pit is shown; good bees and honey are obtained by having good bees, good management, equipment and good location; the poultry exhibit emphasizes a new ration for layers used at the home experiment station at Corvallis.

The mash ration consists of millrun, 25 lbs.; ground wheat 26 lbs.; corn meal, 20; ground oats 10; ground barley, 5; meat scraps, 10; fish scrap, 5; oil meal, 2 1/2; and bone meal 1/2. This mash is mixed and kept before the hens at all times. The ration for whole grains consists of wheat, 50 lbs.; cracked corn, 25 and oats 25 and is fed four lbs. to each 100 hens in the morning and twelve pounds to each 100 hens at night. In addition to these rations all the green feed the hens will eat should be fed and grit or crushed oyster shell should be before them at all times. Feed skim milk or buttermilk for adding and keep all the clean water they will drink before them.

The housewives will be interested in the bacteriology exhibit where the analysis of milk and water is shown. The plates showing the tracks of a single fly is quite convincing as to the importance of fighting this filthy pest. An automatic halopticon is used which shows seventy colored views of the college and student events. Can you tell a Earwig when you meet one? See the exhibit of Earwigs. Motion pictures showing high spots at O. A. C. co-eds in training, dairy tale of two bulls, play days at banff, poultry pests, wheat or weeds, and roads to wonderland, an Oregon scenic will be shown each afternoon and evening. Information and bulletins are given out and Mr. Burt will be glad to talk to any one having some agricultural problem or who is expecting to attend O. A. C.

The equipment included nearly everything in the bee keeper's trade, the principal objects being the frames and cases, foundation wax sheets, together with numerous cans and jars of extracted honey and some fine samples of wax and comb honey.

The honey trade here is on the increase, and the future holds a rosy outlook for apary men who will come in and devote time and energy to the business, studying it from all angles and keeping up with the bees. Friday Stewart reported an order for over 2000 pounds of extracted honey from a big northern firm.

STILL OWNERS ARE HELD TO GRAND JURY

In Judge Taylor's court Vila and Mark Kootz, who were arrested last week by prohibition officers at their home above Butte Falls were bound over this week to the grand jury on three charges—possessing a still, possessing intoxicating liquor and possessing mash fit for distillation. They were each placed under a $1000 bond, which they furnished.

J. T. McKinney was bound over to the grand jury on the charge of failure to support his children; he also furnished $1000 bail.

After a preliminary hearing the case of J. C. Robinson, Frank Brown and C. N. Allen, charged with larceny of a garage, in which a dispute over the ownership of the garage was involved, was dismissed. The state was represented by Deputy District Attorney W. R. Gaylord, while the defendants were represented by Don Newbury.

ALL RECORDS ARE BROKEN BY FAIR POULTRY EXHIBIT

This year's poultry show breaks the record, not only for size, but for quality and added interest. Warner, who directed the exhibition, deserves much credit for putting the show over in a really big way. William Hanna, superintendent of the building, comes in for much credit also.

The new structure is an ideal exhibition house for birds, with its double-decked cages of tin and wire, ample aisles and ventilation. Next year they hope to double the show.

The Abolated Off show won laying honors, Mr. Hanna collecting five eggs a day from the half dozen white leg horn pullets on display. They are 99 per cent birds.

Rev. D. J. Howe showed some fine Bradleys which attracted chicken fanciers to his cages.

A. McMillan of Ashland displayed a large aggregation of Anconas, 38 in all, many being blue ribbon specimens.

Dr. L. A. Salade of Central Point had some fine homing pigeons, together with other species.

Villa Rosa put up the largest display of Thompson's Imperial ringlets, winning first pen and first cock in this class with 25 beautiful birds. The sire cost $50, which was shipped out from New York.

The equipment is as fine as in the biggest shows, and is a duplicate of that used in Madison Square Garden, New York City.

This year's display is the best ever seen hereabouts and is perhaps the finest gotten together outside of the State Fair.
