

GIRDERS END VISIT TO CITY

World Fliers Depart This Morning for San Diego—Encounter Head Winds on Trip From Eugene; Crowd Greet Aviators—Writer Accompanies Fliers for Historical Data.

CHICO, Cal., Oct. 21.—The world fliers passed over Chico at 12:50. They were flying low and were greeted with shouts from hundreds who lined the streets.

The three world fliers, and two escort planes, left Barber field this morning at 10:15 o'clock for San Diego, Calif., planning to spend tonight at Cressy Field, Sacramento, for oil and fuel.

The world fliers circled over the city before heading south, the escort planes being in the lead.

Many from all over Southern Oregon journeyed to the aviation field this morning to view the huge DeHavilland that circumnavigated the globe. The famous squad of fliers arrived in Medford late yesterday afternoon, along with the oil supply, as the plane had here before this summer.

Bucking a strong head wind the first escort plane was sighted shortly after four o'clock, and when scarcely more than the size of a hand, was picked out by the local Standard Oil squad waiting with the oil supply, as the plane had here before this summer.

The Standard Oil prediction proved to be correct when a strong gust of wind raised the plane to one side as it came head on over the Liberty building and a No. 10 was revealed on the wing, after which the plane dropped down over the County Fair buildings, and gradually settled on the field.

Sergeant Fatt stepped out and was followed by an artistic looking gentleman with a little black mustache who proved to be Lowell Thomas, well known traveler and writer, who is accompanying the fliers on their return to San Diego.

Mr. Thomas, it seems, has traveled over the route by land that the world fliers made in the air, and is assisting them in writing the official account of their travels, which will be issued in book form, also in text book form for use in the public schools.

The next escort plane followed soon after, and contained Lieutenant B. S. Wright, who is now the advance agent of the world fliers and Sergeant J. Y. Kennedy, his mechanic. Lieutenant Wright has all entertainments in charge and was soon presented with an invitation to the dinner of the Portland-Medford business men at the Hotel Medford, by H. O. Frohbach.

Meanwhile the crowd had grown to nearly 500 people, and as time passed considerable anxiety was expressed as to why the world fliers did not appear. Mr. Thomas explained, however, that the escort planes are much faster, particularly against a hard wind and that the world planes would soon leave in sight. The words were scarcely out of his mouth before there was a shout from the crowd, "there they are," and after considerable squinting one could distinguish three specks far beyond Table Rock, coming steadily across the sky and toward the landing field. Unlike the escort planes the world fliers did not attempt to make a direct landing, but circled around several times in triangle formation, then straightened out and swinging north veered around rapidly into the wind and landed leisurely—Lieutenant Smith, commander, in the Chicago, landed first, and bumped his way to the far end of the field.

Lieutenant Leigh Wade was second in the Boston II, also bumping once or twice, while Lieutenant Eric Nelson, in the New Orleans, third, made the best landing of the lot, as smooth as a duck settling on a mill pond.

The crowd rushed around the planes and several greeted the aviators, who seemed to be unaffected by the demonstration and yet were very pleasant and courteous to every one. No time was wasted in ceremonials however. Each aviator with his mechanic, proceeded to get busy on testing the engines out, servicing everything up, and even wiping off the fuselage.

The trip from Eugene was acknowledged to have been a bumpy one. Mr. Thomas said it nearly blew off his nose and proceeded to feel that member with one hand to be sure it was still there.

The personnel of the entire world flight party was as follows: Lieutenant Smith and Lieutenant Leslie Arnold in the Chicago; Lieutenant Leigh Wade and Lieutenant H. Ogden in the Boston II (these aviators lost their first plane in the Arctic) and Lieutenant Eric Nelson and Lieutenant John Harding known as "Smiling Jack" in the New Orleans.

The opening of the Craterian theater last night was a great success in every way, with the world fliers adding an unexpected touch of glamour, when three of them appeared on the stage at the end of the third act of The Havoc, while the audience cheered them to an echo. Elliott Dexter, with a few graceful remarks paid them a tribute and expressed his delight in being accorded the honor of opening what he declared was one of the finest theaters anywhere in the country.

There was a splendid audience, every seat being filled, and thanks to the Herculean efforts of the entire working force there was not a single detail which was overlooked in preparing the new play house for its premiere.

The evening's program was opened by a delightful concert on the new Hope-Jones organ by Miss Grace Brown, who was elevated from the pit to the stage level by the electric elevator which is one of the many unique features of the modern Craterian equipment. Miss Brown with her usual artistry, brought out the melodic resources of this wonderful instrument with rare skill and feeling, responded to an encore and was the recipient of floral tributes from admiring friends.

Before the play opened Mayor Earl Gaddis, appeared before the footlights and, on behalf of the citizens of Medford expressed his appreciation of the Hunt company, the builders of the theater, J. C. Cooley, P. G. Neff and Frank Clark, the architect, for giving Medford such a wonderful play house, expressing a universal sentiment, when he said the final outcome, surpassed in its beauty and richness even the most sanguine expectations.

The mayor was followed by Father Wm. B. Hamilton of St. Mark's church, who stressed the importance of such a theater in the artistic and esthetic life of the community. The environment in which we receive our impressions, Father Hamilton pointed out, is a vital factor in the permanence and power of these impressions. The importance of developing the esthetic nature of the individual was also emphasized, and the speaker closed with a truly eloquent tribute to the dramatic artists of the past and present who have done so much to enrich the emotional life of the people.

"The Havoc" proved to be a play of novel situations, affording an excellent opportunity to Elliott Dexter as an unusually whimsical husband, who surrendered his wife to his friend Paul Hersert, a cad and blackguard of advanced views, admirably played by Floyd Irwin, and then turned the tables on him, by acting as an observer to the inevitable moral deterioration of the professional home breaker. The effectiveness of the dramatic struggle, depended largely upon the women, for whom the two men struggled, and unfortunately Miss Jean Nash did not create the illusion of alinement, so essential to the success of such a situation.

However, the play was only a detail in the evening's entertainment. The theater itself, was the big event, and with its beauty and charm, made last night an evening long to be remembered.

George Hunt was also called before the curtain at the end of the third act and applauded, but Mrs. Hunt did not heed the calls for her to come to the front. The new theater begins its film offerings tonight.

KIWANIANS HEAR SHIVELY TALK ON COMPULSORY BILL

At the Kiwanis meeting Monday John H. Shively spoke in opposition to the Workmen's Compulsory Compensation law, saying everyone is in favor of a good law to compensate workmen for accidents and death, that most every employer does provide for such emergencies and that Oregon today has a very fair law.

He said the proposed law is neither fair to employee or employer because it vests all power to hear cases, to say what employment is hazardous, including farm work of all kinds, to fix fines and provides there shall be no appeal to any court whatever, by either employer or employee. The proposed law makes the board to be appointed where the present board is elected. This makes the board absolutely political, he said.

Any law that does not put a curb on a board of three men, appointed by a political party, is dangerous in an American form of government to both parties and is monopolistic and is class legislation and the people should defeat this proposed law, the speaker pointed out.

Roy Elliott, fire chief, John H. Shively and L. D. Bragg of Table Rock were guests of the club.

It was announced that a clinic for cripple children would be held in Medford November 5, to be conducted by two of the most noted specialists in Oregon, through the direction of the Kiwanis club and definite arrangements will be made at the meeting next month.

ELEVEN MEN AGAINST ONE WOMAN!

NOW HERE

"The Woman on the Jury"

To the Women of Medford:

Were you ever on a jury? What would you do if you were on a jury? If you were drawn on a jury under the law you must serve. Do you think one woman should judge another? How would you face the problem which confronts the lone woman juror in this picture?

WIDENER PICTURES ARE GIVEN TO CITY

NEW YORK, Oct. 21.—The Widener art collection, valued at $5,000,000, considered one of the most important private collections in the United States, will some day become the property of the American public, Joseph P. Widener of Philadelphia, financier and art collector, declared yesterday. The collection will be a memorial to his father, who founded it more than 40 years ago, he said.

Mr. Widener's assertion was made in the course of his testimony in an action brought by Prince Felix Youssouppoff of Russia, who seeks to repurchase from the financier two Rembrandts which Mr. Widener bought from him in 1921 for 100,000 pounds. Prince Youssouppoff contends the sale was made only on condition that he be permitted to repurchase the paintings within a stipulated time. Mr. Widener, however, maintains the stipulations have not been lived up to.
