Wherever there is low ground there is now a small lake and the gutters of the streets are running in swift flowing water which carries the leaves and other refuse to the catch basins. The basins and storm sewers have frequently been clogged up at various points throughout the city, backing the water into small lake formations on the streets, thus making it difficult for pedestrians, and keeping the street department on the jump in opening up the storm sewers and basins. Victor Dale, who was placed in jail yesterday, following charges of appropriating government property from the Army here, was released upon furnishing $100 bond. Dale has signified his intentions of pleading not guilty and has been held over for a military trial. It has been discovered that Dale on a recent visit to Pheasant did not make the trip to sell the articles. It is alleged he took from the Army, but went to sell some real estate which he owns in Ashland. No date has been set for Dale's trial, since it has been impossible to thus far make arrangements with the military authorities who will try the case.
