

BRINGING UP FATHER

By George McManus

RICHEST GIRL IN WORLD WILL DO WITHOUT A CAR

NEW YORK, Feb. 27.—A bride and groom-to-be, Abby Rockefeller, and David M. Milton, Jr., are hunting a modest apartment somewhere near Park avenue and Sixtieth street, but not on the avenue itself because rents are too expensive there for a grand daughter of the richest man in the world and her lawyer sweetheart.

The couple are going to live within Milton's modest income. Abby will manage her own household, do part of her own housework and keep a budget. They will do without a car at first but hope to have one later.

Abby will be well able to do all of that, her father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., said through a spokesman, because he had trained his daughter and her brothers to know the value of money; so that they might "meet the problems life will present when they must act for themselves."

While she was being envied as one of the richest youngsters in the world Miss Abby, aged 7, had exactly ten cents a week which she might squander. Her total allowance was thirty cents, but she was taught to save ten cents and put the other dime in the Sunday school collection plate.

None of the Rockefeller children had more than two dollars a week which they might call their own before they were fifteen; before and since that time they have been required to keep accounts of their expenditures by their father, who penalized or rewarded them by the accuracy of the accounts which he always audited.

Later Abby had a large allowance, but she was compelled to provide her own clothes, entertainment, and travel in it and keep the accounts. So that now her father feels that she is self-reliant, "knows the value of money," and is able to assume the responsibilities of a housewife.
