

FLAMMARION OF SCIENTIFIC FAME, ALSO POET, DEAD

JARIS, June 4.—Camille Flammarion, the noted French astronomer, is dead.

Camille Flammarion, the French poet-astronomer, made astronomy popular to the layman. He sugar-coated astronomical facts, but while he won applause from the layman some of his serious minded contemporaries in the study of astronomy attacked many of his theories as pure fancies.

Flammarion, when a boy nine years old, witnessed the sun eclipsed by the moon. Awd by this phenomenon, his chief concern was in how astronomers who predicted this event, were able to tell. Thereafter, the lad could usually be found at sunset on a neighboring hill watching the departing orb and waiting for the appearance of the stars.

In his 15th year he wrote a book on the origin of the world, but, in his own words, "It luckily never met a publisher."

He entered the famous Paris Observatory and became an assistant astronomer to Le Verrier, and wrote his first published book at nineteen years of age. It was translated at once to almost every language.

He soon assumed direction of the scientific review "Cosmos," and also published his second scientific work, "The World Imaginary and the World Real."

With the famous astronomer Godard, the young astronomer ascended in balloons to study the heavens. These observations extended over a period of five years.

During the Franco-Prussian war in 1871, he demonstrated the practical application of his knowledge of astronomy and telescopes. Hidden in an observatory at Passy, as captain of a special corps, he commissioned other astronomers to assist him in study of the Prussian troops banked around Paris.

All overtures for public office after the war were refused by Flammarion. He devoted himself to studying double and multiple stars, their colors, and proper motions and sun spots, the chances of the science in which he specialized.

Most of his great achievements during the latter part of his life were accomplished in his observatory at historic Juvisy. It was called the "half way house of kings and courtiers." Here Napoleon had received the news of the fall of Paris and from here he departed to Fontainebleau to bid adieu to his army, in 1814. The estate was a gift to Flammarion from an admirer, M. Meret.

Flammarion will be remembered for his many books, written in a poetic and philosophic vein. While great secrets of the universe are therein disclosed, they are clothed in language that is as entertaining as a novel. It is on this that his popular fame rests.

Flammarion himself had said: "Within the last quarter of a century our sublime science has been wholly transformed. Instead of watching inert masses in motion through the void of space, the study of the evolutions of the stars and life has taken its place. It is a signal advance over the old school, and may be looked upon as likely to prove the grandest feature of astronomical science in the near future."

MAYTAG SHOPPE HAS SUCCESSFUL CAMPAIGN

The Maytag Shoppe, connected with the Crater Lake Hardware company, is engineering an extremely successful selling campaign for Maytag washing machines, according to Morris Leonard, sales manager of the shoppe. Recently an entire carload of 100 washers was received and the local dealers have set a time of two months in which to sell the entire shipment. If successful this will establish a remarkable record for washing machine sales in southern Oregon.

Mr. Leonard has as his sales force helping him in the Medford territory, L. V. Leonard and Charles Wortman, and this trio has been making real Maytag history in this city.
