

MARTIN BOWERS IN PORTLAND PRESENTS SPEED TRAP VIEW

Gold Hill's factional and auto traffic troubles are again given wide publication through a long interview published in the Portland Oregonian of Wednesday with Martin Bowers, which appears prominently on the editorial page as follows:

"The speed trap at Gold Hill, Ore., which has given that community an unenviable reputation among motorists, is a sore spot with the merchants. They realize that tourists, warned that the speed trap is maintained, do not stop in the town to spend a nickel if it can be avoided, and the money left in towns along the highways by motor tourists has become a valuable source of revenue. 'The merchants,' says M. D. Bowers, druggist, who is registered at the Imperial, are opposed to the speed trap. We have been fighting local conditions, but so far without much success. There are many men in Gold Hill who are not in business, and they have wives, and they vote, and each election when we try to clean out the administration responsible for our plight, we get licked by a narrow margin of 15 votes or so. The people who clean us up in the elections are not particularly interested in the welfare of the town, its growth or prosperity, and these are matters which, naturally, concern every business man. However, the situation will work itself out—it has to, for such things cannot go on without end. Guardians of the motoring public have picketed the town. They had banners painted announcing that a speed cop was on duty; there were men with red flags during the day and red lanterns at night to stop and warn the motorists. Some California tourists felt so grateful that they tipped the guardians and one lad pocketed $9 in one day for his services."

CALLS GAS ATTACK TALK HOT AIR

WASHINGTON, June 10.—Statements that airplanes can drop gas bombs that will poison cities were declared to be "utter rot," by Rear Admiral Albert Gleaves, retired, in a Rotary club address here today.

"When the air radical makes any such statement," he said, "he ignores mathematical authority that it would require 20,000 tons of such gas to poison, for instance, the inhabitants of the District of Columbia. And even were such an enormous amount of gas available," he added, "it would require more than all the planes in the world to carry it."

The advance troops which arrived here yesterday morning have been busy unloading baggage, ordering supplies for the main military body, setting up field ranges and other equipment and in making Camp Jackson ready for occupation.

The tents had already been put up and company streets laid out by a small detachment, which had been at Camp Jackson for about two weeks.

COOLIDGE GIVES S. BOARD VIEWS ON SHIP SALES

WASHINGTON, June 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—President Coolidge has suggested to the shipping board that it delegate completely to the fleet corporation authority for negotiating sales of ships and lines, reserving to itself final approval or rejection of the contracts.

While no action has been taken by the board, indications are that the suggestion will be approved when Chairman O'Connor returns next week from a trip to Florida.

The board has been sharply divided in considering many sales, the most recent case being on June 5, the day the president wrote his letter, when it rejected proposals for the sale of freight ships and lines in the north Atlantic. In that case one plan was recommended by the fleet corporation and another by the ship sales committee of the board. The final vote was against both proposals.

In his letter President Coolidge said he was greatly impressed with the "great difficulties" in the negotiation of sales contracts.

"I have the strong feeling," he added, "that such complex negotiations cannot be competently carried out by the independent discussions of buyers with the several members of the shipping board."

"Furthermore, there is an unwillingness on the part of some of our shipping men to enter such an involved scene of negotiations.

"In order that we should make a vigorous attempt to carry out the purpose of the merchant marine act—that is the disposal of the merchant marine into private hands—on equitable terms, it seems to me vital that these negotiations should be placed in single hands reserving to the shipping board the final voice in the acceptance or rejection of each specific contract."

"I would like to suggest to the board that all negotiations of every character for the disposal of ships or lines should rest in the hands of Admiral Palmer (president of the fleet corporation), that the members of the board should refuse to see or discuss these questions with any individual during the course of such negotiations; that Admiral Palmer should be authorized to sign such contracts subject to the approval of the board. The board will then be in a position to exercise its proper function in the acceptance or rejection of the contracts."

Gregory Zinovieff, chairman of the executive committee of the third international, and other members of that body will participate in the demonstrations.

SHEPHERD LOSES FIRST ROUND

the will Shepherd had drawn up on the day the boy became ill and would have become null and void," said Crowe.

The allegation that Shepherd then took up seriously the story of bacteriology was Crowe's next accusation, followed by the detailing of the youth's final illness. The prosecutor pounded the railing about the jury box and his voice rose.

Shepherd, white with a prison paler seemed paler but once he turned and smiled at Mrs. Shepherd.

The prosecutor ended his opening statement in one hour, concluding with a discussion of young McClintock's last illness, after he said Shepherd had learned at the National University of Sciences how to slay the youth and had obtained the necessary germs from Charles C. Falman for a promise of $100,000 from the McClintock estate.

Defense Counsel Stewart sought to have Judge Lynch instruct the jury to disregard Mr. Crowe's remarks identifying Shepherd as an Indianapolis police court shyster, both Shepherds as panhandlers, a reference to Shepherd as following "like Mary's little lamb," and accusing the defendant of being "but the court ruled Stewart should have made his objections at the time of the utterances. The defense asked the exceptions to the ruling and language be noted.

It was the subject of lobby comment that Prosecutor Crowe had refrained from asking the death penalty although the state battled three weeks to obtain a jury willing to inflict the death penalty "in a proper case."

"I ask you to return such a verdict as the evidence may warrant," said the state's attorney.

Judge Olson Testifies.
Judge Olson took the witness stand after Judge Lynch had refused to accede to the defense's contention that the state first should put on witnesses to prove a crime before proving a motive. Prosecutor Crowe indicated he intended to establish the necessary "corpus delicti" through testimony by Judge Olson.

Judge Olson's ten minutes on the witness stand dealt virtually entirely with his acquaintance with Mrs. McClintock.

On cross examination he said he had talked with Billy McClintock's father once and never had talked with Billy McClintock.

The "corpus delicti" was established by Judge Olson's testimony.

REAL LIQUOR IS NOT OBTAINABLE IN U. S. SAYS HAYNES

WASHINGTON, June 11.—(A. P.)—Roy A. Haynes today completed his fourth year as prohibition commissioner and administrator of the Harrison narcotic act and he observed the anniversary with an optimistic statement of prospects for ultimate and complete defeat of the rum and drug bootlegger.

It has been a hard fight, said the commissioner, who took office 18 months after national prohibition became effective, and while many obstacles to successful enforcement have been overcome, he found others still looming up to present new hazards.

"The big bootleg operator," Mr. Haynes declared, is making his last stand as sources of illicit liquor are being closed to him. Real whiskey, wine, gin and brandy, he said, are "practically unobtainable now for beverage use."

Progress in enforcement during the past four years, he described as "really remarkable," considering the obstacles which have had to be overcome.

"This is a national law," he added, "and in various localities there is strong opposition therefore in such localities where local assistance has not been given, of course, conditions are not what they should be, but everywhere they are so improved over four years ago that there is almost no comparison."

Against the inroads of the drug peddler whose customers today are estimated at between 110,000 and 150,000 addicts, the government is making progress, said the commissioner, due to the "strict accountability," now required of importers, manufacturers, producers and wholesale dealers.

DRY CRUSADE IN NEBRASKA RESULTS IN SCHOOL FIGHT

LINCOLN, Neb., June 11.—(By the Associated Press.)—If all the school textbooks in use in Nebraska which describe the processes of fermentation, the production of alcohol and the manufacture of intoxicating liquors are to be discarded, nearly every current work on physiology, chemistry and physics will have to go, according to opinions expressed by several persons connected with the state department of education.

State Superintendent Matzen is in receipt of a letter from Elmer E. Thomas of Omaha, federal prohibition director for Nebraska, which encloses a complaint from A. L. Shamblin, superintendent of schools for Blaine county, relative to illustrations of a distilling apparatus and information as to the method by which malt and spirituous liquors are made, contained in a physiology being used there.

The prohibition director said he did not know whether this was an actual violation of the state prohibition law which forbids advertising any recipe or formula for the manufacture of liquor, but he thought it contrary to the spirit of the law and believed anything of the kind should be discouraged.

Although the Blaine county official was said to be horrified that his school book should portray how intoxicants are made, the laws of Nebraska made it compulsory to teach in all schools supported by public money or under state control, the effects of alcoholic drinks and other stimulants and narcotics upon the human system. Textbooks treatises on how alcohol is distilled are thought to be a part of this instruction.

He was taken to the psychopathic hospital.

JACKSONVILLE TO BOOST FOR MORE USING OF GOLD

The city council of Jacksonville at its meeting this week took action which it is hoped will start a local, county, state and nation-wide movement in the interest of putting more gold in circulation.

This action was the passage of a resolution urging the merchants and people of the Jacksonville community to use gold as much as possible in all business transactions, rather than paper currency, the object being to stimulate the circulation of gold and thus help out the mines of the Pacific coast section, from which it is said much of the present output of gold comes.

The Jacksonville council will send a copy of this resolution to other city councils of Oregon and ask them to adopt similar action in favor of gold circulation.

Wall Street Report

NEW YORK, June 11.—The closing was strong. Maxwell B certificates soared 3/4 points and Norfolk & Southern, Atlantic Gulf & West Indies, Great Western Sugar, United Cigar and General Petroleum were among the many issues to sell 2 1/2 points or more above Wednesday's final quotations.

Constructive trade news and easy money were important contributing factors to the upward movement in today's stock market. Bullish operations reached their greatest intensity in the oils, motors and public utilities. Total sales approximated 1,150,000 shares.
