

PRESIDENT WILL SEEK SECLUSION AT SWAMPSCOTT

WASHINGTON, June 16.—(A. P.)—While President Coolidge will be kept in constant touch with governmental affairs during his summer stay at Swampscott, Mass., arrangements are being made to afford him as much relaxation and freedom from the cares of office as possible.

A clerical force of sufficient size only to handle matters that need the president's personal attention, will be transferred to Lynn, where executive offices will be maintained. This will be Secretary Sanders' headquarters but it is likely that the president will rarely, if ever, go there.

At White Court, the summer White House, Mr. Coolidge will be isolated, guarded by secret service men and a detachment of marines. Persons desiring to confer with him will be first required to consult Mr. Sanders, and it is planned to keep the president's engagements to a minimum. It is probable that he will spend part of each day in his study, where he will receive the few callers who will have engagements, but on the whole he is expected to rest, taking occasional strolls, automobile rides and short cruises on the Mayflower, which will be anchored at Marblehead, nearby.

Mr. Sanders living quarters will be at the New Ocean House, less than a mile from White Court. From his offices in Lynn, Mr. Sanders will be in direct communication by telephone with the president's study and also by wire with the White House here, where Rudolph Forster, executive clerk, will remain to sift out of the mass of routine communications those which should be dispatched to New England for the president's attention.

Among those who will accompany the president when he makes his departure from Washington, a week hence will be E. W. Smith, chief telegrapher at the White House, who will be in charge of communications at the Lynn office; Patrick E. McKenna, who for more than twenty years has been clerk at the door just outside the offices of the president, and his secretary and E. C. Geisner, the president's stenographer. Several others will round out the clerical force.

Both of the president's physicians—Dr. J. F. Coupland and Dr. Joel Boone—will be with him at Swampscott, as will both the White House aides, Colonel S. A. Cheney and Captain Adolphus Andrews, commander of the Mayflower.

Indications are that the president and Mrs. Coolidge will not do much entertaining during the summer. Neither Miss Laura Harkin, Mrs. Coolidge's social secretary, nor her assistant, will accompany her. Mrs. Coolidge, however, has planned to take along the White House cook, Louise Jongblok, and several house servants.

UNIVERSITY HAS SHAKE UP

man was elected to the school of journalism.

To fill vacancies, Dr. Fred N. Miller, LaFayette college and Dr. Wilson Stegeman, Rush Medical school, M.D., become, respectively, university physician and assistant university physician.

Ernestine Trummel, Wisconsin graduate and Earl E. (Spike) Leslie, Oregon graduate and ex-athletic coach at Eugene high become instructors of physical education to fill vacancies.

Professor James H. Gilbert, head of the department of economics and member of the faculty since 1907, was appointed by the board of regents in session here today, acting dean of the college of literature, science and arts of the University of Oregon to replace Dean Collin V. Dymont, who has received a leave of absence of one year. Dean H. Walker, student adviser was appointed dean of men for one year.

Four members of the English department tendered resignations which were accepted. Clarence D. Thorpe is leaving to accept a professorship at the University of Michigan and Oscar Brown has taken a position in Kansas. The other two instructors leaving are E. W. Merrill and Ralph Hoelber.

BIG CROWD SEES PARADE

close of the first period of training and instruction.

From the first notes of reveille at 5:30 this morning there was an undercurrent of excitement and mystery apparent everywhere throughout the big tent city which houses the troops. Brigade headquarters apparently was the nerve center of this unusual activity. Orders were coming and going on the run, staff officers horseback in automobiles and about arrived, conferred with General White and departed in a steady stream throughout the forenoon.

No deviation from the regular schedule of training was apparent up to noon, the attention of all commands being devoted to platoon drill and other tactical movements having to do with the usual subdivisions of the company.

Great Parade Ordered
It was at the close of the morning drill period, however, that the troops learned the cause of all the activity at headquarters, when they were ordered to hold themselves in readiness for a great parade, to be held through the streets of Medford, at 2:30 in the afternoon.

Every soldier of the entire brigade, who could be spared from actual camp duty, was under orders to take part in this pageant. Only those in hospital, on guard and in the company kitchens were excused.

Promptly at 1:30 p. m. the three regiments were assembled and assigned their positions in the parade. The uniform of the day was blouses, caps, trousers and strapped leggings, with the usual arms for infantry, artillery, machine gun, howitzer and engineer units.

Legion Circus Makes a Big Hit

Lucile White, vaudeville entertainer at Legion Circus

The Legion Circus and 49 Days celebration opened last night with a bang, with the house packed by soldier boys and citizens. Eight acts of vaudeville were put on during the evening and were considered as high class as any ever seen in the city.

Paul McDonald of the Legion committee has announced a complete change of vaudeville acts will be General George A. White and his staff swung into the Crater Lake highway and headed south toward Medford shortly after three o'clock.

Word had reached the citizens of Medford that the parade was to be held and the sidewalks of the city were lined by thousands of enthusiastic spectators who cheered the troops to the echo as they marched through the principal thoroughfares.

In announcing the reason for holding the parade of the entire 82nd brigade General White said that it was done in partial return for the commendable spirit of hospitality and many acts of friendship and courtesy extended toward the members of the Oregon National Guard by the citizens of Medford. That they appreciated the pageant was clearly shown by the manner in which the entire city turned out to witness the parade, the cheers which amounted to a continuous ovation and the favorable comments from every quarter upon the appearance and performance of the military units.

Not only was every soldier available in line but the big guns of the artillery and their caissons, drawn by the famous battery horses, but the Howitzers and all other wheeled armament, together with motor transport of every description appeared in the long column. Medford had a real demonstration of military occupation although by a friendly force, and one that will live long in the memory of all who were privileged to witness the spectacular event. Now more than ever, are the residents of this community eager and determined that the encampment of Oregon's National guard shall be an annual institution here.

An Interesting Event
Announcement is made by the commanding officer of Company A, 14th Engineers, that on Wednesday afternoon, which day marks the opening of the second period of instruction, there will be conducted an event of peculiar interest to the general public in the field just north of Camp Jackson. This will be a complete "demolition demonstration" to which the public is invited.

A bridge has been constructed across the irrigation ditch in that field together with field telegraph and telephone lines, etc., and motor transport presumably setting, will cross this bridge, after which the lines of communication will be destroyed and the bridge blown up, to

Summer School Opens at Medford Business College

The Medford Business college will reopen on its summer schedule next Thursday, June 18, after having been closed for the past two weeks on account of the recent fire in the building. Temporary use will be made of rooms least damaged by the fire while the work of rebuilding the partially burned structure will be completed as soon as possible. A special feature of the summer work at this college is the six weeks course in Garvin Shorthand designed for those who desire a quick mastery of stenography for use in the business office or in college and university work. The Burroughs Bookkeeping Machine course is also a popular course with
