That the United States faces an era of continued and increasing agricultural prosperity, which will be made more and more permanent as practical business methods particularly in the way of cooperative marketing, are applied, was the prediction of U. S. Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine made this afternoon at a luncheon given him at Camp Jackson by the guest of Brigadier General George A. White and staff of the Oregon National Guard.

HON. W. M. JARDINE, U. S. Secretary of Agriculture

Mr. Jardine said he had excellent reports from nearly all the agricultural regions of the country, with the exception of some of the Rocky Mountain states, and that he believed that the agricultural depression thru which the United States had passed had served as a needed lesson of the danger of over expansion and the special need of improving the methods of merchandising agricultural products.

CLARENCE DARROW

DAYTON, Tenn., June 25.—Withdrawal of an invitation to Clarence Darrow to address the Tennessee Bar association at Memphis, Friday because his presence might be misconstrued, and a statement by Bainbridge Colby, expressing surprise at the "holiday atmosphere" surrounding the impending "evolution trial" were high lights in an otherwise dull period of preparation for the court battle.

Mr. Darrow, Mr. Colby and other attorneys for the defense of J. T. Scopes, indicted science teacher, have just concluded conferences in Knoxville. Mr. Darrow departed for Chicago and the former secretary of state for New York, while Dudley Field Malone returned to Dayton, stopping off in Chattanooga long enough to give a public statement of his views on trial issues.

GREEK GOV'T O'ERTHROWN BY GENERAL

Navy Joins Army in Successful Revolution and Cabinet Warned That Bloodshed Will Be On Their Hands—Civil and Military Posts Occupied By Rebels.

PARIS, June 25.—(A. P.)—Dispatches from Saloniki report that Greece is in the throes of a revolution and say the Greek fleet has joined the movement.

The dispatches say a military government has been formed under General Pangalos and has occupied all civil and military institutions. Premier Pangalos was appointed Greek minister of war in June, 1924. He formerly was generalissimo of the Greek army and military governor of Athens. He aided the rebels who defeated the Greek royalists in Athens in September, 1922, and thereafter became minister of war in the Gonatas cabinet. He resigned that office within a month to join the Greek army in Thrace, then fighting the Turks. He became commander-in-chief during that campaign and after returning to Athens there were rumors in 1923 that he would attempt to overthrow the government. This plan, if it existed, did not materialize and in November, 1923, he was appointed military governor of Athens. On December 20, 1923, he proclaimed a Greek republic, demanded the resignation of the Gonatas government and favored Papanastasiou for premier.

SALONIKI, June 25.—(A. P.)—The newspaper Independent announces the Saloniki garrison decided to demand the immediate resignation of Premier Michalakopoulos because of his alleged inefficiency in office and for the purpose of forming a military government. The revolutionary officers occupied public buildings and railway stations. Censorship has been established. A revolutionary proclamation has been issued.

Leaders of the revolution telegraphed the president of the Greek republic: "We proclaim an overthrow of government. We will hold the cabinet responsible for any bloodshed." A military communique says the revolutionary movement is now in control throughout Greece. The Greek fleet under Admiral Hadjiki-riakos, former minister of marine, has joined the revolution.

ATHENS, June 25.—(A. P.)—The Greek cabinet headed by Premier Michalakopoulos has resigned and former Premier Papanastasiou has agreed to form a new cabinet, offering cabinet portfolios to the leaders of today's revolution: General Pangalos and Admiral Hadjiki-riakos.

MOUNTAIN FALLS FORMING A HUGE LAKE, WYOMING

Extraordinary Phenomenon in National Forest Destroys Buildings and Sweeps Away Herds of Cattle—Tourists Stranded, But Safe.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., June 25.—(A. P.)—Western Wyoming today has a new and rapidly growing mountain lake, according to reports received here last night which said a great mountain of rocks, forming one side of a canon on the Gros Ventre river in the heart of the Teton national forest toppled from its base and across the stream. A section of the national forest was smashed to kindling, many buildings were lost and herds of cattle were swept away as the result, according to the message.

The phenomenon was reported in a message received here from J. E. Jones manager of the telephone exchange at Jackson, Wyo. Jackson is about sixteen miles from the scene, according to the report. Mr. Jones reported that the fallen mountain had formed a huge dam across the river and that it will impound a body of water probably hundreds of feet deep, because of the sharp declivities on both sides of the river. In five minutes, according to a report received by Mr. Jones, the water rose 200 feet in the canon. It was estimated that the stream will swell into a lake seven miles long and a mile wide before the water rises to the point where it will spill over the obstruction. Several tourist parties were held up because of the occurrence, but none is in danger, the report added.

According to the reclamation service hydrographer the temperature was still mounting and probably would reach 97 by late this afternoon.

PORTLAND, Ore., June 25.—(A. P.)—Rapidly rising temperature this morning gave promise of another torrid day for Portland. From 82 at eight o'clock the mercury rose to 86 at nine. ## GERM CASE ARGUMENTS END TODAY

Night Session Ordered for the State's Plea—Shepherd Is Worried—Defense Counsel Explains Discrepancies and Statements By Accused.

CHICAGO, June 25.—(A. P.) The Shepherd murder trial probably will be concluded with a session tonight. Judge Thomas J. Lynch and the lawyers for both sides tentatively agreed to such a step at a recess conference in chambers this morning. The first jury plea in behalf of Shepherd was continued today, by William Scott Stewart, chief of defense counsel. He spoke for more than two hours yesterday and said this morning he would require all of the forenoon and probably would continue talking this afternoon.

The indicated length of his argument set back the probable time of the case going to the jury. After Stewart concludes, W. W. O'Brien, his associate, will close for the defense. Robert E. Crowe, state's attorney then will close for the prosecution.

Shepherd entered the court room this morning with his face showing distinct marks of worry. He seemed more careworn than at any time since he accused of using typhoid germs to murder his millionaire foster son, William Nelson McClintock.

Stewart took up the manner of the making of Billy McClintock's will and scored that as a point in Shepherd's favor. "If he had been nursing the boy along to slay him, wouldn't he have gotten someone else to draw the will?" asked Stewart. "That is one of the points he is going to have to explain in the probate court in the will fight. He must face it. But if he had been trying to prepare for an alibi, wouldn't he have had somebody else draw the will so as to cast suspicion from himself?"

Stewart took up the testimony of many witnesses in the trial and analyzed it from his viewpoint for the jury. The latter Shepherd wrote to Miss Estelle Dehling, a young nurse with whom he once was friendly "was just a letter to a girl." Stewart said, even though Shepherd wrote that he was bankrupt, had no plans and probably would close his office and drift away from it all.

Stewart admitted that Shepherd had said to a newspaper reporter that he hurried home to throw out of the house anybody who tried to marry Billy. He pointed to that as an illustration of fatherly interest rather than a desperate effort to prevent a marriage which would nullify the will in which Billy had left Shepherd the $1,000,000 estate.

Stewart laid great stress upon Falman's statement that he gave Shepherd three test tubes of bacilli, "one of paratyphoid A and one of paratyphoid B" and that he had not said he gave him typhoid germs. The omission of a confession that he had given Shepherd "typhoid" germs was made intentionally so that if the state's attorney ever brought Falman to trial he would have a defense, Stewart shouted.

SALEM CONVICTS YELL AND THROW PROTEST AGAINST WATER SHORTAGE

SALEM, Ore., June 25.—Incensed because of a shortage of water in their cells, several convicts created a disturbance at the state penitentiary last night and broke half a dozen window panes by throwing tobacco tin through the bars of their cell doors. They added to the disturbance by yelling for water and pounding on the doors. Warden Dalrymple said he thought not more than six prisoners were involved and that he had not been able to find out who they were. Some of the convicts had allowed the water faucets to run so their cells to cool the air with the result that water in the prison tank became low and cut off the flow.

It was first reported that a riot of large proportions was created by the prisoners, that they broke furniture and windows, greatly exceeding the number actually shattered.
