The exterior of Wilmington, while not strictly colonial, has enough of the colonial to make it an interesting design. The rather formal entrance with turned columns, the seats at the sides and the trellis at the corners add attractiveness.

The interior is arranged for six rooms, all on one floor. An enclosed stair leads to the attic, which can be used for storage or in case of necessity for sleeping quarters. Living and dining rooms are separated by a large arch. This and the fireplace at the end of the living room, with built-in seats and bookcases, are features of these rooms. A china closet is located at the end of the dining room.

The kitchen is exceptionally complete, being provided with cupboards and bins, a cooler and an ironing board. A generous sized breakfast alcove is provided at the rear. Besides having two good bedrooms and a bath, all accessible from the hall, there is a den at the front, directly off the living room. Closets and linen cases are arranged for the bedrooms. The stair to the basement and attic is placed at the rear of the hall.

The basement, being the full size of the house, provides ample space for storage, laundry, fuel and furnace.

WHAT IS HOME?

Eight hundred replies came to the question "What Is Home?" The most popular answer was: "Home—The place where we grumble the most and are treated the best."

Make Your Home More Than a Place in Which to Grumble

An architecturally correct home means economy, convenience and satisfaction—nothing to grumble about. Yet it costs no more than the haphazard kind.

Hundreds of modern home designs are on display at this office. They are architecturally correct, economical to construct and conveniently arranged.
