MINING NEWS OF SOUTHWESTERN OREGON

Edited by Southwestern Oregon Mining Bureau.

Why Not Be Fair? The flippant way in which a lot of half-baked would-be financial writers and paid protagonists of "high and mighty" in the financial world speak of mining and mining stocks is "funny" to those "in on the know" and would be funnier still except for the fact that there is a point at which any joke becomes stale.

Mineral and mining securities need no defender in us, but we are getting tired of these generalities about the "large losses in mining stocks" which are handed out just as if "large losses" had not been made in all other classes of securities. What about the losses in railroad stocks? The simple truth is that more money has been lost during the last two years by shareholders in one large railroad now in the hands of receivers than has been lost in all mining stock issues in the last ten years. What about losses in some bond issues which were brought out by some of the largest financial houses in this country? But it would be almost "les majesté" to name them.

And what about the losses in radio stocks on the curb during the past six months, which according to the Wall Street Journal, total over $100,000,000 on the basis of present prices. If a mining stock were to decline 200 per cent in the course of a few weeks, there would be a "howl" and investigations by the board of governors, which recently had been dropping those mining issues which would not meet the stiff listing fee now charged or how to certain restrictions which, while supposed to protect the public, might actually prove detrimental to their interests.

We do not impugn the motives of the big financial houses that make "honest mistakes" in their offerings of bonds and stocks, but it is only fair that these mistakes should not be charged to any particular industry or class of stock as a whole. Nor do we doubt the intentions of the curb market governors, although they have been inconsistent, to say the least, in their recent attitude toward many mining issues.

Money has, of course, been lost in mining stocks, but money has also been made in mining stocks—more than has ever been lost, many times over. And money will continue to be made in mining stocks because mining is and always will be one of the greatest and most prosperous of all industries.—Mines and Markets (N. Y.)

Sixty years ago John Mackay, father of Clarence Mackay, worked as a miner at Virginia City for $5 a day and his fortune was later estimated at over $100,000,000. No, he didn't save this amount out of his wages—made it mining on the Comstock lode.—Mining Topics.

What Ellisha J. Lee Says. "How many people realize that the mines of the country give the railroads every year an originating tonnage over five times greater than of all forms of agriculture combined. The fact is that products of the mines are not only the greatest single element entering into the traffic of our railroads, but make up more than one-half of the total tonnage transportation, and exceed by three times the traffic volume of their nearest competitor in this respect, the products of manufacturers."—Ellisha J. Lee, vice-president of the Pennsylvania lines.

Publicity That Counts. The need of southwestern Oregon is experienced capital to develop its natural resources; and this is true of mining, as well as of other lines of industry. To supply this need, the nature and character of those resources must be truthfully brought to the attention of the experienced investor. This in the mining industry, the Southwestern Oregon Mining Bureau has been doing for nearly two years past, and each month the scope of that publicity is widened by the inclusion of new mediums to spread the truth about the rich mineral resources the Creator deposited here to be developed, and at this time reliable news of the southwestern Oregon district is published weekly in the Courier, The Medford Mail Tribune, the Spokesman, the Gold News and the Twice a Week Oregon Statesman at Salem, while semi-monthly news and descriptions of the district are published by Mining Truth, Spokane, which covers the entire northwest, including Canada, the Salt Lake Mining Review, which covers the middle west, and beginning with the August issue by Mining Topics of San Francisco, which covers the southwestern territory. In addition to the above and as a direct result of the editors of the state seeing the mineral exhibit displayed by the bureau last Friday, the Daily Abstract and Record of Portland, a paper devoted to the business development of the state and read almost wholly by business men, will begin to carry news of this district this week. The whole coast field is, therefore, being told from week to week, and from month to month, about our mineral resources and the progress of their development.

To Members of the Bureau. The bureau is doing a wonderful work for your benefit, and a few members are devoting a great deal of time and effort to secure an adequate development of our minerals. This work costs some money and the payment of delinquent dues before August 1 will aid the officials in keeping the work going and will permit of paying off our small indebtedness. Try and make an extra effort to have your dues in yet, this month, and arrange to attend the regular monthly meeting on August first.
