MEDFORD SCHOOL BOARD PROTESTS TEXT BOOK PLAN

The local school board at its last meeting addressed the following letter to the state text book commission, which is also signed by H. Hedrick, Milton A. Miller, chairman, Lebanon, Oregon.

"We are taking the liberty of addressing you relative to the present text book situation. The threatened change in adoption is operating to tie us up and handicapping us in securing books with which to open school on September 8. Local book men hesitate to place orders so long as there is uncertainty as to whether changes will be made.

"We are very much in hopes that no changes will be attempted at your meeting this month for these reasons:

"1. Books of new adoption made at this date could not be available for opening school in early September. If we commence with the present text books, as we necessarily must, and are compelled to change to others during the year, the expense will be considerable.

"2. The state course of study is already written. It was written, naturally, on the basis of present adoptions. New text books would mean no course of study in those subjects this year.

"3. In view of the advance in prices we are aware that most of our text books are to cost us more than they did under the old contract, but the cost here would nowhere equal the damage that a new adoption would do us at this late date or that this uncertainty will do us if allowed to continue.

"4. We appreciate the efforts of the commission to secure lower prices in text books, but we are very anxious that no adoptions be made hastily and without due time for study and investigation as contemplated by law. Merit of the text book rather than a few cents' saving on the list price, we believe, should govern all selections.

"Our people are very much opposed to any further changes in text books this year. The cost to patrons and to the school system would be too heavy and interference with school work too great. We trust, and in fact believe, that the commission will view the matter in the same light and give us as soon as possible a definite statement that texts now in use will be continued this year at least. In that way we can proceed to order the books which we must have to open schools."

A few weeks ago the commission authorized the advertising for bids for new text books. The matter of more changes and new adoptions which it threatens to make, will come up at a special meeting which will be held August 29. The action of the commission was brought about in part by the refusal of publishers to renew text book contracts on the same basis as they were entered into in 1919, due to advance in prices.

The state law permits the adoption of text books for a period of six years. The 1919 contracts therefore expired this year. The 1923 legislature amended the law to provide that instead of a wholesale change every six years, the commission might change one-third every two years. One-third of the text books have already been changed this year and the attorney general of Oregon has ruled that there is no authorization in law for any further changes.

It was the unanimous opinion of the school board that if the commission carries out its threatened purpose and new adoptions are attempted at this date, serious injury will be done both patrons and schools.

The text book commission consists of Milton A. Miller, chairman, Lebanon, Ore.; Superintendent G. W. Hig, Salem; Mrs. Marjorie Newberry, Medford; Superintendent A. C. Hampton, Astoria, and Superintendent R. W. Turner, Dallas, Ore.
