Fire Chief Roy Elliott warns local housewives to use extreme caution when building fires in cookstoves, which have not been used for the greater part of the summer, because blue fires may easily result when the stove is overheated. The first example of such case occurred last night at 7:30 when the fire department was called to the Earl Moore residence on West 19th because of a burning fire which necessitated the using of five gallons of chemicals before being extinguished.

HOW TO MAKE SAUER KRAUT

Remove the outside leaves of cabbage, cut in quarters, and cut fine, cutting hearts with the rest of the cabbage; pack at once into a stone jar as follows: Use one lb. of salt to 40 lbs. of cabbage, sprinkle a little salt at the bottom of jar, then a layer of three or four inches of cabbage and pack down gently with a wooden potato masher. Repeat with salt and cabbage, being sure that your proportion of salt is such that it will be distributed equally, using the amount given above. When packed cover with a plate or wood that will go inside the jar; do not use pine or fir; put a cloth under cover, next to cabbage and a weight on top. Use a granite or flint (do not use a brick or sand stone); ferment 10 days, skimming off film that forms daily. When gas bubbles cease to arise when container is tapped the kraut is ready for use. Now wash cloth, cover and weights, put on new prime, and your kraut will keep. Use this recipe and you will have the best kraut you ever tasted.
