

DOCTOR'S WIVES FORM AUXILIARY TO STATE SOCIETY

At yesterday's session of the Oregon State Medical society here the action of the Public Health league in regard to public meetings was endorsed. The public meetings are a new innovation, the meeting held here Wednesday night being the third one of its kind ever held in the state.

The state society also endorsed the state board of health's proposal of weekly reports from each doctor in the state to the board, in order that health conditions of Oregon may be tabulated.

The meetings were presided over by Dr. A. C. Kinney of Astoria, president, who was slightly delayed in arriving here, having stopped in Roseburg while en route.

Last evening at 6 o'clock the women's auxiliary to the Oregon State Medical society was organized temporarily until a permanent organization is completed next year. The auxiliary consists of doctors' wives banded together primarily for the purpose of fostering work in public health through state and county organizations, and to promote the circulation of Hygeia, official lay publication of American Medical association.

A committee appointed for the drawing up of the constitution and bylaws of the organization include Mrs. J. Earl Elise of Portland, chairman; Mrs. Courtland L. Booth of Portland; Mrs. W. B. Neal and Mrs. C. E. Hunt of Eugene.

The constitution they will draw up will be presented at next year's meeting for adoption by the members. Mrs. J. Earl Elise will go to Dallas, Texas, next April as delegate from the state auxiliary, she having been appointed at last evening's session.

Suggestions for the auxiliary were made at the session of the medical society last year at Portland. Many states of the union have auxiliaries, and it is said Oregon is one of the first Pacific coast states to organize.

ANSWER FILED IN ACTION AGAINST RED TOP SCHOOL

An answer to the suit filed last week by J. L. Kershaw and 18 patrons of school district No. 10 (Red Top school), against the majority members of the school board and contractors building a new school house, was filed Thursday in the circuit court. A restraining order prohibiting construction work on the new building until the squabble is settled was granted by the county judge. Five hundred dollars damages is asked by the contractors on account of the delay.

The answer alleges that Frank Haynes, the minority member of the school board, "was disappointed" at the granting of the contract to H. C. Lockwood and J. B. Meehan, "has appealed the contractors and done whatever he could to interfere with the construction work."

It is further charged that the petition circulated in the district was sponsored by Haynes, and that at a meeting arranged with the county school superintendent to reach an agreement, the defendants appeared but the plaintiffs did not.

It is further alleged that a deputy state building inspector made an inspection of the building, and the corrections ordered made by him were then made before the filing of the suit.

On behalf of the contractors it is asserted that the green frames used to hold the concrete mixture have shrunk in the sun and wind, and that the forms have been "disturbed" by parties unknown to the defendants, resulting in "leakage and damage to the extent of $500." Judgment and dismissal of the suit is asked, along with the annulling of the order of enjoinder.

House Peters at The Rialto Today

The most famous of detective stories. Its ingredients a mixture of mystery and melodramatic thrills. "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman," flashes on the Rialto screen today.

The character of Raffles has been heralded by millions as the last word in scientific sleuthing. The story opens aboard an ocean liner, where a famous string of pearls disappears and is again returned to the owner in a manner that is more mysterious than the theft itself. Astir, everyone is looking for Raffles, said to be on board. When the ship anchors the pearls disappear again. Who the amateur cracksman is remains unsolved.

The slick and polished activities of his gentleman crook make the minds of everyone whirl madly. The baffling story of Raffles is not cleared up until the final fifteen feet of film.

The part of the amateur cracksman is played by House Peters. Others in the cast are: Miss Dupont, Hedda Hopper, Walter Long, Winter Hall and Freeman Wood.

In a comedy bubbling with fresh and novel situations, Reginald Denny is seen in "Till Show You the Town," at Hunt's Criterion. Having one of the customary comedy hokum.

Is a racy, roaucant love story of an eromantic college professor whose sly interest in life is centered in the completion of his dissertation on "Apartment House Life in Ancient Rome." Circumstances constantly which prevent Alec Dupree, played by Reginald Denny, from carrying on his monumental work.

It is a comedy of the first water and not devoid of thrills. One of the scenes in the production takes in a fast airplane tour over the metrop.
