Local and Personal

As usual on a national holiday Medford, with all the business places and offices closed, was a very quiet city today, especially in the business district where only the garages, hotels, restaurants, confectionery and tobacco stores were open. The postoffice was closed except the general delivery window and stamp window, which was open an hour this morning, and there was no deliveries of mail, city or rural.

WOMEN PLAN TO EXHIBIT FRUIT AT THE COUNTY FAIR

The Rogue River valley has long been famed for the size and quality of the fruit it raises. As a result, the fruit shown at the county fair excites the admiration of visitors from all parts of the country. The women of the county are famous cooks, and have always been noted for their economy and thrift in canning the wonderful fruit; but in the past only a small quantity has been exhibited at the county fair.

In an effort to make the fair "bigger and better than ever" the women are expected to do their part by making the exhibit of canned fruits and vegetables as large and as impressive as the exhibit of the fresh ones.

The canned foods have been moved from the women's building to a prominent place in the agricultural building. This will give a larger and more effective display of fruits than ever before.

The interest in this department is alive, so Miss Ada Brewster, the superintendent, reports, and the outlook most promising for the best display of women's work at any fair in southern Oregon.

LEGION GOLFERS MAY QUALIFY ANY TIME DURING THE WEEK

Rain yesterday cut short the golf tournament at the fairgrounds course which was to have established handicap figures for players who wished to enter the tournament September 13. A large number of golfers was present early in the morning as was also Rolph Cowgill with a plentiful supply of watermelons.

It has been decided by the American Legion golf comittee that players who wish to establish their handicap by playing two rounds may do so any day this week, or next Sunday, and report the scores to L. C Garlock at the Chamber of Commerce. Prizes donated by local merchants will be awarded for the best scores made in such rounds. The tournament play will be delayed one week, the competition to be held Sunday, September 20 at which time all those who have established their handicap will be eligible to enter the list.
