

EUGENE SUSPECTS ARRESTED HERE BY SPEED COPS

Upon the request of Sheriff Taylor of Lane county, State Traffic Officers J. J. McMahon and C. P. Talent arrested four men a short distance south of Central Point at 11 o'clock last night, bringing them to this city to be held until the arrival of the Lane county sheriff today.

The men, who gave their names as Ralph Timm, Clarence Smith, Robert Mitchell and Claude Mackey, are alleged to have committed forgery and to have broken into a store near Eugene. A total of $285.36 cash was found on their persons, together with two I. W. W. membership cards and a pair of brass knuckles.

The men were traveling in a large car headed south when McMahon and Talent halted them to stop, but instead of doing so they speeded on. McMahon drew alongside in order that Talent might gain foothold on the fleeing car. With that officer on the car the men stopped after traveling a short distance farther. They were searched for firearms, but none found.

The man upon whose person the brass knuckles were found, was taken in charge by McMahon, while Talent bid the three others to take places in the front seat and drive to Medford, while he seated himself in the rear.

When they arrived here the men were promptly locked in the city jail to await the arrival of Sheriff Taylor from Eugene.

REACH TEMPORARY AGREEMENT

commissions were as far apart as they were upon presentation by Finance Minister Caillaux of his first settlement proposal last Thursday.

The American commission immediately went into an executive session.

President Is Informed.

Mr. Coolidge was informed of every detail. It was declared that the negotiations up to last night and it was said on behalf of the American commission that the situation had not changed overnight insofar as any indications from either camp showed.

While the American members were disinclined to talk about their conference with the president, it was apparently the belief that the American commission will wait for the French to move next.

Members of the American group hoped, however, that the conversations would not end immediately.

Those of the Americans who refused to consider negotiations at an end based their hope on the slogan "We never quit trading until the game is ended." It was pointed out that changes may come up as a result of the general conversations to be held today.

It was noted that Secretary Mellon's statement did not indicate the width of the gap separating the two commissions.

The French commission, informed unofficially of the statement by the American secretary, left to M. Caillaux the determination of its course. One of the members described the memorandum as "tragic," but would not comment at length.

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—(A. P.)—Plans of the French debt commission to sail tomorrow on the liner La France have not been altered so far as the management of the line has been advised today.

At the offices, however, it was explained, the reservations would be held until this evening, when it was expected advices would be received as to any changes resulting from the rejection of the latest French settlement proposal.

BOSTON, Oct. 1.—When Captain Herbert T. Parker, inspector of hulls, asked Geler in the hearing today whether he had made any previous statement to any other board the witness sprang a surprise by saying that a man who had represented himself as a Captain Parker had come to the hospital and questioned him. The man said he would come back the next day with a typewritten statement for Geler to sign but he never came back.

Geler admitted talking with officers and members of the crew of the City of Rome.

Michael S. Lira, another survivor, testified that the last words he heard Lieutenant Dobson speak were "give us a line," addressed to the City of Rome. On being awakened by what he thought was a battery explosion he followed the commander who went into the central operating compartment and ordered all hands to quarters.

Lira followed the captain to the bridge. The City of Rome was close alongside and Lieutenant Dobson was shouting to the steamer to throw a line. A minute later the submarine went down and he was drawn under which tangled in the antenna. He was rescued by a boat from the steamer.

Geler said he did not hear any whistles, signals, bells or orders while he was on the submarine.

When all the submarine's lights were on Geler said, one light would be visible to other vessels at all times, but the side lights could be seen only from certain angles. He did not know in what direction it was likely the S-51 was running at the time of the collision. The boat was having an engine test which was due to last until the next morning and was to have stayed on the surface throughout the night.

TENNIS STAR IS BEATEN AT GOLF BY ALEXA STIRLING

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 1.—Mark K. Browne of Los Angeles, runner up in last year's championship, was eliminated today in the women's national golf tournament at the St. Louis country club three and two by Mrs. Alexa Stirling Frazer of Ottawa, Canada, who was champion for five years while a resident of Atlanta.

Miss Browne made a gallant defense against almost unbeatable golf as Mrs. Frazer after scoring three under par with a 37 on the first nine to be five up, was even with perfect figures on the last seven holes. In fact Miss Browne had to sink long putts on the last two holes to get a halve and it was only at rare occasions that the Canadian gave the tennis star a chance to win.

Miss Cummings fulfilled her promise by defeating Mrs. Hill on the fifteenth green. She will play in the semi-finals with Miss Collett while Mrs. Frazer will meet Mrs. Fordyce.

CAPTAIN CROSS-EXAMINED.

Jonel William Mitchell that there should have been parachutes on the Shenandoah.

Opposed to Parachutes.
"I would not permit any parachutes in an airship," he said with emphasis. "I might modify that by saying that I would not allow any of the present type to be placed aboard the ship."

As an additional safeguard in airships, Heinen proposed that smaller gas bags be used so that if they expanded to the very fullest they would not press against and strain the hull structure.

His theory had been that it was such expansion of the oversized cells in the Shenandoah that caused her hull to break in mid-air. Those on board have denied before the court that such was the case.

Replying to a hypothetical question put before the court, Captain Heinen said there were no outside forces in the air that could break up a dirigible, unless the hull structure previously had been strained by internal pressure.

The question was that of a ship being tossed up and dropped in the air just as the Shenandoah was going over the pressure height, then falling, then rising again and finally meeting a terrific upward gust on the bow.

If You Want a Zenith ORDER NOW!

Never before has the buying public shown so much preference for one make of Radio Set.

They know it's good, that good reception is assured. They want it because it has proven itself by the severest test possible.

When MacMillan started for the pole, he wanted to be sure of constant communication with home. In a sense his life and the life of his party depended more or less upon it. After exhaustive tests he chose the Zenith.

He had more at stake than a few dollars. He had to be sure. He chose the Zenith.

It will not be possible to fully supply the demand. We will get only an allotted number. If you want one we must have your order.
