Gold was found in a well in the business district of Jacksonville a few days ago," said G. A. Gardner, former judge of Jackson county, who is at the Imperial. "A man was digging a well in what is probably a part of Rich Creek on the block near the U. S. hotel, where there was an old stable. Gold was being taken out at the rate of $40 a day. One pan brought up $12. The well digging is continuing, but the gold is not as plentiful now as it was." Judge Gardner says there are still tons of gold in that country, but, of course, some one has to hunt for it. Prospecting continues intermittently. Jacksonville was a real gold camp in its day and the traditions still live.—Portland Oregonian.
