

OREGON LEGION TAKES LEAD IN MITCHELL FIGHT

OMAHA, Neb., Oct. 7.—No matter the fate in committee of proposed resolutions regarding Colonel William Mitchell, the army's "in bad" critic of the nation's air service, indications were strong today that the subject of adopting an official attitude towards the colonel would be taken to the floor of the American Legion's seventh national convention for a decisive contest.

Chaplain Lonergan is known as a man of strong convictions and a powerful orator. He also is known to be a strong supporter of Colonel Mitchell, and in the unusual move by the Oregon representatives some of the delegates confessed to see a determined move towards a showdown on the Mitchell matter.

The aeronautical committee had a meeting set for early today to receive the report of a sub-committee of five appointed last Monday to digest numerous proposals for resolutions to be presented to the convention.

A perfunctory program was set for today with six addresses by high ranking army and navy officers and two civilians and three committee reports the only fixed business.

TYPHOID AND OTHER THINGS

TO THE EDITOR:
It will require at least a year to bring in Big Butte water. In the meantime, what is going to be done with this epidemic of typhoid fever—or will it abate as soon as the bonds are voted? If not, we may all die off so that a mausoleum or a grave yard would be a better investment than a water system.

These epidemics seldom appear in Medford, and in fact never do except just before an attempt to put across a big issue of water bonds. Had as this "epidemic" is, so far only one case of typhoid has been reported, and it may have come from "contaminated" water, or have originated from a typhoid fly. J. P. Hiltson, ex-chief of police, has just returned from a hunting trip at Fish Lake and reports that the storage dam was closed down about the 18th of September, entirely cutting off all lake water, since which time only the purest mountain water, supplied by the several big springs, has entered our intake. Since the "condemned" sample analyzed by the "State Board of Health" in cooperation with the U. S. Public Health Service," as reported in Tuesday's Mail Tribune, was taken from a city faucet on Summit Avenue on the 25th of September, it could not have been Fish Lake water unless it had stood a long time in the faucet. This, of course, is possible, for some of our fire hydrants have not been flushed out since last spring, and the date when the city reservoirs were last cleaned out remains a mystery. It is actually a wonder that typhoid or some other pestilence doesn't originate in the filth left for months uncollected in our city system, and it is a two to one wager that the contamination found by the scientists came from the Medford reservoirs or pipe lines rather than from Fish Lake. But after the bonds are voted no doubt our hydroelectric city superintendent will get busy and clean up things a bit. In fact, a number of street hydrants have been flushed the past few days, since the water analysis was made.

Speaking of typhoid, it will be recalled that Ashland citizens recently indicted Jesse Winburn for maintaining his summer residence, "Sap and Salt in the Woods," on Ashland creek above the water intake. They procured an examination of the water below the Winburn cottage, and found it highly impregnated with typhoid bacillus. Jesse, who himself was quite resourceful as well as wealthy, employed scientists to analyze samples of Ashland Creek water taken above his residence, away up in the mountains, and lo! more typhoid germs were discovered than the other experts had found. So the Ashland Creek water was branded "dangerous" from end to end. But nothing was injured except the grass, which died for lack of it.

Isn't it a travesty that a million dollar water project cannot win on its own merits, that its proponents must employ propaganda, deception and fraud to get enough votes to carry it? What a stigma on the town—what an indictment of our water officials—is their assertion, whether true or false, that our water is contaminated? Only a few years ago experts pronounced it equal to Bull Run water. Its source is an icy lake in the Cascade mountains from which we bought the first right in two purchases—nine second feet in all. It cost taxpayers and water users a half million dollars. Medford officials permitted the owners of a secondary right to impound the waters in the lake for irrigation purposes, and render them unwholesome, in utter violation of the law. They now propose to abandon this system to the agency that despoiled it, and spend another million building to a source where irrigation projects have prior rights. And this is wisdom—in Medford.

SLOW SIGNS TO BE PUT UP ON BUSY CORNERS

With a view to making auto traffic on the main city arteries and their approaches more safe by suggesting caution to all drivers approaching those streets or arterial highways where speed limits are posted, or traffic is somewhat congested, the city council last night adopted the report of its street committee that proper signs be painted on the pavement at once, later to be replaced when finances justify, by permanent signs reading "Slow" on the following streets: Eighth street approaching Riverside.

Main street approaching Riverside. Sixth, Fifth and Jackson, approaching Riverside. Riverside, approaching Eighth, Main, Sixth and Jackson streets.

There are also several street intersections where drivers are confused as to the parking rules in force, and to prevent common mistakes the council has decided to paint the curbs at these intersections with "Don't Park" signs of yellow and black paint.

dungeon, and the alleged unsanitary conditions and lack of ventilation excused. King asserted that only a few months prior to Murray's break and while he was confined to the "ball pen" without a "known sufficient cause," shots were fired into the cell he occupied, and he asked that the jury be shown the marks on and about the door of the cell made by the shots.

After an extended conference in the judge's chambers between the opposing attorneys and Judge Kelly the judge allowed the request of the defense over the protest of the prosecution.

In making its ruling the court held that it was regular and desirable that the jury should have a complete view of the premises on and about which the alleged crime was committed, that it might consider the case intelligently. The jury was taken to the prison shortly after 10 o'clock and spent the remainder of the morning in inspection of the premises.
