Denunciation of the suddenly discovered cruelty at the Pendleton Round-Up, comes just in time to fit in well with the state-wide gloating over hanging three men.

It must be annoying and aggravating, when a Republican plot unexpectedly goes Democratic.

WHY ALL THE RAPTURE? (Klamath Falls News) A cold drizzle drenched Klamath Falls early this morning. Lights shone dimly through wind-drawn clouds which the rain slowly zig-zagged its course. An occasional pedestrian, chin deep in the collar of his overcoat, made his way down the street. It was very quiet.

NORMAL AT ASHLAND—(Hillside Yreka Journal.) Glad to hear it.

WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT (Haltmore Sun) This holds even more true with such an excellent press agent as Colonel Mitchell leading the flyers. If you do not believe this, have a look at the attendance record at the president's Air Board meeting room when General Drum was holding forth and compare it to Colonel Mitchell's day in court. This government will allow just so much money for warlike purposes. If only two fingers are in the pot there is more for each of them than if a third and much more popular one is on the contest.

After all, it is the man who holds the money bag who determines how much army or navy we are going to have. Organization will change the effort of either of them but little. The thousand flyers now in the Army Air Service would accomplish but little more on so much money if they were in a separate service, but it is surprising how much these same thousand flyers can do with twice the money, in or out of the army.

Our aviation machinery is lubricated with money and if the wrong man holds the oil can there is sure to be trouble.

IF YOU HAVEN'T VOTED,—VOTE!

A VERY election day is a test of good citizenship,—a test that is not only in this city, but in the country at large, is becoming more and more discouraging.

This country was founded upon the rule of the majority. But it is becoming more and more a rule of the active and vociferous minority. No one is to blame for the condition but the majority, the hundreds of good people who call themselves good citizens, but fail to exercise the first requirement of good citizenship on election day.

Medford is today having one of the most important elections in its history. The polls do not close until eight o'clock tonight. If you have not voted there is ample time to do so.

Anyone who has been a resident of the state six months, a resident of this city three months, and a resident of the precinct in which he now resides for at least 20 days preceding the election, is entitled to vote. There are no property qualifications. Every man and woman of voting age, may, under these conditions, exercise the franchise.

So if you have not already voted start for the polls now. Here are the voting places:

- Medford, North Main, Fichtner's garage. Medford, South Main, Armstrong Motor company. Medford, North Central, city hall. Medford, South Central, public market. Medford, Oakdale, Oakdale grocery. Medford, Newtown, Washington school. East Medford, residence, Mrs. L. E. Stanfield, #01 East Main, P. & E. station. Southeast Medford, Roosevelt school. Southwest Medford, residence W. H. Stinson, 304 Hamilton street. West Medford, residence of Josephine T. Clark, West Fourth street.

Let the decision today be the decision of the people of Medford as a whole.

THE VISITOR.

SOMETIMES pack my large valise and visit loving friends; two days with them I dwell in peace, and then my visit ends. For in two days a man can spiel 'most everything he knows; no further talk can be unreal, and if he's wise he goes. My hosts, they see me to the door with soothing words, and then they wring my fingers and implore that I'll come back again. I always am a welcome skate when visiting my friends; they know I'm sure to pull my freight before my welcome ends. Some visitors hang on and on, when they should rise and sprint; they see their hosts in anguish yawn, and do not take the hint. If they have ears, if they have eyes, if they have human souls, they surely ought to realize their welcome's full of holes. And still they stay, as in a trance, infest the porch and lawn, when every sigh and every glance invite them to be gone. And when at last they do decamp they're asked not to return; in no one's window does a lamp of welcome brightly burn. The hosts remark as they depart, "Good riddance! Go your way! For guests like you would break the heart of any mortal jay." Sometimes the people of a shack beseech me to remain, when I pick up my carpet sack, and start my rusty wain. "Two days," I say, "my limit is, when visiting I go;" and when I come again, gee whiz, the lamps of welcome glow!

Antitoxin Is Antidote.

What could possibly cause a parent to object to the administration of antitoxin to a child desperately ill of diphtheria, as did the poor ignorant father in the case we described the other day.

Of course the child may have been doomed in a very event. Nevertheless there is a mathematical certainty about this fact: Antitoxin administered in sufficient dose and early enough in the course of the diphtheria, preferably into a vein, completely antidotes the diphtheria toxin or poison and saves life.

The only conceivable reason why a parent should prohibit the administration of such a remedy, as antitoxin, to a sick child yet offer no objection to the administration of any other remedy the doctor might care to give such a child, is ignorance, superstition and credulity, and this state of mind is not only self-propagating, it is propagated and exploited by a small army of snake merchants, purveyors of nonmedical nostrums and now fangled quacks, mainly through the columns of the shady, shoddy "magazines" which exist primarily to provide a medium whereby these legitimate and highly respected dignitaries get their hands into the pockets of the unwary public.

Nature's Own Antidote Ignorant, superstitious, credulous people have only vague ideas about antitoxin. The very name of it connotes something evil or dangerous in their poor minds. But any one of ordinary intelligence should understand that an ailment means poison; in short, antitoxin is antidote, the antidote for the poison of diphtheria.

Antitoxin is manufactured by nature in the blood of every victim of diphtheria, and if enough is produced the diphtheria patient presently gets well naturally or spontaneously, without any human aid whatever. If the natural process of antitoxin manufacture is a little slow, the diphtheria poisoning presently gains the upper hand and the victim succumbs, unless human aid is promptly given, and even then the recovery may come too late. Healthy young horses are given minute doses of diphtheria toxin or poison (not diphtheria germs, but the poison wormed by their growth, as alcohol is formed by the growth of yeast plants) which are gradually increased as the horses gradually develop immunity against the poison. In time horses so treated develop sufficient immunity to withstand an enormous dose of the toxin which would quickly kill an ordinary horse. The blood of these immunized horses is used as antitoxin, of course after it has been scientifically tested, and freed of its corpuscles and concentrated and standardized, so that a given quantity contains just so many units of antitoxin.

Measured with Scientific Accuracy. A unit of antitoxin is the quantity of the antidote required to neutralize or render innocuous the smallest quantity of diphtheria toxin or poison which is fatal to a small animal such as the guinea pig.

A young animal or a young child, is enormously more susceptible to the diphtheria poison than an older individual is, and consequently the younger the child the greater the dose of antitoxin necessary, relatively speaking. It is simpler to think of antitoxin in thousand unit doses rather than single units, for the diphtheria poisoning, in the average case of diphtheria in a child, is a matter of thousand unit assaults and not a trifle of single units. When you buy a home or an automobile you pay so many thousand dollars for it and not so many cents.

Ten thousand units of diphtheria poison requires 10,000 units of antitoxin to neutralize it, and it is a bad gamble to give any less antitoxin in the first dose in any case. We can't afford to gamble on the child's capacity to manufacture his own antitoxin, when there are plenty of horses that have the finest care and the kind of pleasant exercise which might give few horses enjoy, to provide the precious antidote in unlimited quantity.

If there is anything that makes me tired it is to hear the ignorant, superstitious, credulous people, or dishonest people with axes to grind, people who are usually fond of baked trout, good beefsteak, French fried potatoes, omelette, buttered toast, coffee with cream, and other blessings for which we must thank our friends the animals, mouthing banalities about "filth" or the "danger" in antitoxin.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Please let me know if walking is good exercise. (John D.) Answer—There is none better. The average adult dose for keeping fit is six miles daily. Walking has now become one of the most expensive kinds of healthful exercise, and the expense is the one drawback, but for those who can afford it, six miles a day certainly pays.

Best Dandruff Remedy At one time I found a recipe for dandruff in your columns. It had sulphur and petroleum and something else in it that I have forgotten. But I found it the best dandruff cure I had ever used. It stopped the dandruff altogether for nearly a year. (P. H.) Answer—Precipitated sulphur.....1 dram Salicylic acid.....20 grains Ointment of rose water.....1 ounce

Apply a piece the size of a pea by parting the hair and rubbing the ointment into the scalp, treating a different area of scalp each night, and taking a shampoo about once a week. Continue this for three or four weeks. Petroleum jelly may be used instead of the ointment of rosewater, but is less elegant.

Artist, Not Scientist I am an arrested case of tuberculosis, but some days I still have fever. On such days I seem stronger to do my work. Does fever give me strength? Is there danger of bringing back the trouble by being too active? Am I harmful to those who work in the office with me? I am ashamed to be asking questions which I ought to ask my own doctor, but my husband is a Scientist and I don't like to displease him by going to a doctor. (Mrs. M. P. A.) Answer—It sounds rather as though your trouble is active, not arrested. It is very foolish to humor your husband's artistic or scientific scruples at the risk of your own health. If anything should happen to you who will take care of your husband. Better waive his temperamental objections and get under the care and advice of your physician without delay.

The creation of a separate water master district in Josephine county was decided upon this morning by the county court at the regular monthly meeting. For the past two years, this county has been tied up with Jackson county with a deputy water master serving the county. Tom Pearce has been deputy for that period. Who will fill the position is not yet determined, this being decided by the state engineer.—Grants Pass Courier.

The Baptist church of Medford held its annual meeting at the church last evening, beginning the program with a dinner at 6:30, after which the business and social parts of the evening were held. Nearly three hundred members and friends were present. It was a happy occasion, and frequent bursts of applause, when reports were read or measures passed, showed the fine enthusiasm with which the church is taking its task.

Poems That Live

The Dreamers. The gypsies passed her little gate— She stopped her wheel to see— A brown-faced pair who walked the road, Free as the wind is free; And suddenly her tidy room A prison seemed to be.

Her shining plates against the walls, Her sunlit, sandal floor, Her brass-bound wedding chest that held Her linen's snowy store, The very wheel whose humming died,— Seemed only chains she bore.

She watched the foot-free gypsies pass, She never knew or guessed The wistful dream that drew them close— The longing in each breast Some day to own a home like hers, Wherein their hearts might rest. —Theodosia Garrison.
