Ye Smudge Pot

By Arthur Perry.

At Springfield, Oregon on October 8th, according to the Eugene Register the following incident occurred:

Complaint was made by Mrs. Ora Read Hemenway, principal of the Brattain school, to police today that Clifford Koch, 12-year-old Springfield boy, had kicked a hole in the plaster in the new building. She asked the local peace officers to prosecute the case.

Instead of hitting Master Koch a few times with the flat side of a ruler where it would do him the most good, the schoolma'am took no chances on being accused of heinousness and unbridled savagery, and yelled to the police, and the case will be carried to the highest court of the land. What caused the Koch kid to kick a hole in the new plaster? Is he shy of organic salts? Has he been getting too much iron in his spinach? The day has passed when the exuberance of youth is tamed with a paddling in school, and another one when he got home. It is also passe to warm up a lad on general principles, whether he needs it or not. Instead, "the local peace officers are asked to prosecute the case."

The driver laid the blame on a locked steering wheel, and failure to let go of the girl in time.

OBLIGING, BUT SORRY
(Klamath Falls News)

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am a girl of 17. Last winter we had a boy of 19 boarding with us. We were real good chums and one day he came home from work early while I was the only one in the house, so we got suppzer together. He asked me to kiss him, and while I was doing so my mother came in. Of course she was angry, and sent him away. Since then I have had no freedom at all.

25 years ago tomorrow, a now militant Humdinger, Inc., took a Portland milliner buggy riding. The horse became frightened at a wind-propelled paper sack and tore off a hind wheel on Charles Strang's drug-store.

The agent drives it 500 miles and it's a new car; you drive it five miles farther and it's a used car.—(Elm City Clarion.) A mouthful, and a good one.

The bird season opens today. Hunters rejoice at the opportunity to shoot feathered creatures, and each other.

It may interest some to know that the hellraising at Kelso, Wash., started with the sale of nightgowns, under the direction of an imported disturber whose name is split up the back.

14 local citizens who used to call the jr. seedsender "Bob," now call him "the eastern Oregon senator," if they have to mention him at all.

WHOOPEE! SAVED AGAIN
(Baltimore Sun)

An apology is due to Mr. Coolidge, we think, after reading today's news. Therein we note that the President has taken a bold stand in the very face of the sanctity of "protection", and has lowered a tariff rate. Daring the possibility of flooding our markets with the pauper "bob white quail" of Mexico, the President has reduced the duty from 50 cents to 25 cents per "bob white quail."

This is the night young female devotees of the dance go over to Nellie's, and vice versa, to get their lessons for Monday.

WAR CLOUDS CLEARING IN EUROPE.

THE CLOUDS are clearing in Europe, in the only way they ever could clear.

All the trouble since the war, and the fear of another conflict have been due primarily to continued hatred between Germany and France.

As long as this hatred continued and the diplomacy of the respective countries was based upon it, hope of peace and reconstruction was vain.

One is scarcely justified in declaring the danger is over and the millenium arrived. But the conditions today are unquestionably better than they have been in half a decade.

At Locarno, Switzerland, this week, the German and French leaders enjoyed a heart-to-heart talk, over a tea-table in a country villa. According to press dispatches the utmost good feeling prevailed.

Germany waived the matter of war guilt and France endorsed the entrance of Germany into the League of Nations. Poland and the Baltic corridor still remain sources of serious friction, but above all the details of adjustment and more important than any of them, was the unquestioned spirit of friendliness and conciliation, between these two traditional enemies.

If this diplomatic reapproachment can stand the strain of public prejudices, in both countries, then there is no good reason why Europe should not enjoy a steady recovery, and peace and a reasonable prosperity again reign.

Probably anything like permanent peace is impossible until the Russian problem is settled. But with an end to the feud between Paris and Berlin, there is no reason why a united Europe could not, in course of time, even solve the knotty Muscovite tangle without resorting to bloodshed.

QUILL POINTS

History gives few pages to the man who decided to await developments.

A dominating personality is one that can make a bill collector act apologetic.

Americanism: Being horrified by birth control; killing children with automobiles.

The more we hear from some officials, the better we like the Coolidge policy of silence.

Proof that the late Czar's cousin hasn't wit enough to handle the thorn in his desire for it.

At least Hylan can enjoy the next Democratic convention, when Al and Dixie meet.

A man may make an ass of himself before he gets a million, but it isn't considered news.

Anything can happen now. A Chicago jury found two murderers guilty, instead of crazy.

A deliberate mind may be more trustworthy, but it's a nuisance in a cafeteria.

It's awful to be poor and have a witless son and not be able to provide him a high-powered car.

It must amuse the gods to hear the argument that the Filipino will be fit for self-government when he becomes like us.

The reason it is difficult for a man to marry his ideal is because she is after her ideal, also.

In England the unemployed don't even report and stand around where the foreman can't see them.

Correct this sentence: "Don't worry, Dad," said she; "if coal goes up, we girls can do without silk stockings."

The objection to learning one new thing each day is the difficulty of remembering what you learned last month.

If Mitchell were a private, it would be interesting to hear him hold forth concerning second lieutenants.

Another good way to preserve your teeth is to avoid argument with large men who have red hair.

HAVING FUN.

IN MY tin can, my pink sedan, I gambol every day; and people cry, as I pass by, "He spends his time in play; while others work we see him jerk his wagon fro and to; we others sweat to sidestep debt, but he has naught to do. We ply the hoe and see him go cavorting down the lane; while we cut grass he's burning gas with his indecent wain. Oh, life is tough and fierce enough, we say, when such things be, when some must strive while others drive their boats with pistons three." But in my prime I spent no time joyriding there and here; I labored hard, naught could retard or throw me out of gear. I did my best, I kept abreast of other toiling gents, and when I earned a buck I yearned to salt down twenty cents. My bundle grew as seasons flew, as years went like a streak, the silver heaps, by bounds and leaps, grew larger every week. While others burned the coin they earned in idle, feckless style, my hard earned francs were placed in banks and swelled my goodly pile. Now, now I drill along the hill in my tin-plated dray; I have the price and life is nice, although I'm old and gray. So I advise all working guys to save the bright bawbee; then when they find their prime behind, they'll play around like me.

Personal Health Service

By WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Signed letters pertaining to personal health and hygiene, not to disease diagnosis or treatment, will be answered by Dr. Brady if a stamped, self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Letters should be brief and written in ink. Owing to the large number of letters received, only a few can be answered here. No reply can be made to queries not conforming to instructions. Passing of the Sickly Sex.

A girl aged 18 complains that she suffers severely from cramps with each occurrence of what should be a normal function and she has always suffered in this way. Is there any remedy?

There is a remedy, but owing to the ignorance of our educators, the dignified silence of the general medical profession and the very skillful propaganda maintained by the egregious nostrum interests, it is very difficult to apply the remedy. In the first place the girl's own mother is usually afflicted with Billings complaint which she has acquired from prolonged indulgence in the propaganda aforementioned and by inheritance. In the second place, there is still a considerable minority of moss back medical practitioners in the way of any endeavor to enlighten the sex. And finally, the discussion of such a question is seriously restricted and hampered by a polite regard for the dictates of prudery. The nostrum people can get their lies over and perhaps the more readily by the use of equivocating terms and phrases such, for example, as "weakness," which honestly means nothing in particular, but which in the mind of a deluded person can mean everything. I say one cannot resort to equivocation when trying to teach or tell the truth, for only plain, candid language will convey the idea. Plain candid language is forbidden by custom. I wish, therefore, that readers would inclose a stamped envelope properly addressed when asking questions about such matters, so that I may send an unequivocal reply by mail. No custom, law or rule prohibits plain, candid language in a personal letter, indeed there is no excuse for any other kind of language in a letter.

Experience has proved in thousands of cases that the modern practice favors normality and prevents most of the functional difficulties which the misguided women were wont to suffer in the past. The modern practice is wholesome; the old-time practice was morbid. The modern practice is healthful; the old-time practice played into the scheme of the nostrum makers as completely as those shrewd business brigands could wish. The modern practice is common sense practice because it is founded on physiology. The antique practice was absurd because it was based on superstition and misinformation.

Just what is the modern practice? As clearly as I can explain it is this:

There is no time when a member of the feminine sex may not take her customary bath or go in swimming or play her ordinary game or do her usual work or attend a dance or engage in any activity just because she is a member of the feminine sex.

There is nothing about feminine functions that require more care or consideration than other functions do. All the bogeys conjured up by the nostrum gentry, the ignorant old women and the poorly educated medical practitioners need not scare an intelligent, healthy young woman out of her ordinary activities.

Doctors who still occasionally venture to refer to the change of life as though it were a disease or an explanation for ill health are now indulged as quaint humorous phenomena in the medical profession.

Physical education is the remedy for the difficulty the young correspondent complains of.

Sometimes I have hopes that some day somehow this education may be given to every girl in our common schools.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Near Heart Specialist Discovered.

I believe you told a correspondent recently that you did not know of any heart specialist in America. ——— ———, M. D., Philadelphia, is a heart specialist in every sense of the word. Or do you call him an electrocardiographist?—(Senior Medical Student).

Answer—For a minute or two you had me quite excited, but on referring to the medical blue book I find that the doctor claims his practice is limited to internal medicine, which field includes a lot more than the heart. Your man is noted as an expert in the use of the electrocardiograph.

The Cat Comes Back Anon.

Before I lose the friendship of all my old aunts and uncles please shed a ray of cold scientific light on this question: Is there anything in the superstition that a kitten or cat can in any manner "take" the breath away from a child or a baby? —B. J. N.

Answer—You said all there is in it—superstition. This will no doubt bring some irrefutable testimony, but we cannot consider second or third hand yarns; not enough that the witness "knew the woman who saw it happen," the witness must be an eye witness.

Sage Tea.

Your correspondent who asked about sage tea for darkening the hair will find that about one teaspoonful of sage and one teaspoonful of black tea steeped in a cupful of water will help to darken the hair if applied at frequent intervals, and is quite harmless.—A. L. M.

Answer—It would be harmless, at any rate. The correspondent, I believe, was deceived by a certain hair dye which purports to be "sage" but is really a concoction of lead acetate, and that might prove poisonous.

Timely Views on World Topics

"Capitalism Has Had Its Day," Says Lady Cynthia Mosely, Socialist

Although the daughter of a Tory statesman, Lady Cynthia Mosely is running for parliament on the socialist ticket. In a recent speech she explained her reasons for becoming a socialist and said that her work in the slums of London had convinced her of the failure of the conservatives to remedy social evils.

LADY MOSLEY

"I wanted to find out things for myself," she said. "I realized long ago that the capitalist system was doomed, so I decided to earn my own living, like an ordinary worker. I started in the intelligence department of the war office during the war at a salary of $7 a week. The work was of a confidential nature.

"I became so proficient at the end of two years that my salary was raised to $15 a week. I started at the bottom and finished on top of the jobs in that department.

"After that I had a breakdown in health and decided to join the army of land girls. I worked on a Sussex farm six months, getting up in the cold morning at 5:30 o'clock to feed the ducks and chickens, milk the cows, plant turnips, gather eggs, and make butter and cheese."

Lady Cynthia has done a good deal of work in the slums.

"The appalling things I saw there brought forcibly to me," she said, "the fact that many human beings are being condemned to lives of misery through no fault of their own. Why should I, through nothing I had done, be able to secure privileges which were denied to others? It is the right of every man, woman and child to have a share in these things.

Capitalism to Fail

"Many people," she continued, "could not believe that a person like myself should belong to the labor party. My origin ought to be taken as an extra guarantee of my sincerity and I am willing to give up the advantages of that origin.

"Labor has colossal problems to tackle and solve. Things are getting worse and worse and I see no solution under the present system. The capitalistic system has had its day and is on its last legs. The remedy in my opinion, is the nationalization of industries such as mines, electricity, etc."

In support of her views she cited the trolley system, the postoffice, police, the army and navy, all of which she said were socialistic institutions.

Who's Who

Sterling Fessenden.

The lord mayor of Shanghai, Sterling Fessenden, is a Yankee from Maine. He rules over 2,000,000 people and his orders are backed up by the gunboats of the United States, England, France, Italy, Japan and others.

STERLING FESSENDEN

He was born in Ft. Fairfield, Me., and was educated at Bowdoin college. Arriving in Shanghai in 1903 he was one of hundreds of U. S. lawyers there. By dint of hard work Fessenden mastered the intricacies of the Chinese language and through his ability to speak it he became well known in legal circles. Fellow barristers made him dean of the Eeastern Bar association which is made up of American lawyers.

Fessenden is said to be a keen administrator and well fitted to handle the affairs of one of the fastest growing cities in the world.

COMMUNICATIONS

Hole in One Prize Offered.

To the Editor:

Possibly you have noticed, from time to time, the advertisements appearing in the American Golfer regarding the Canada Dry Hole-in-One club and the free case offer. Many of your golfers no doubt know about it, and to convey them this information we are going to ask you to explain the details.

To every golfer who shoots a hole-in-one during 1925 we are going to give a fifty bottle case of Canada Dry free. No affidavit is required. The successful golfer merely sends his score card and a letter signed by the secretary of the club, to Allen & Lewis, Portland, Oregon upon receipt of which they will present the free case with our compliments.

Thanking you very much for your co-operation in this matter, we are Very truly yours.

MRS. C. K. ALFORD AT LOCAL HOTEL, SUES FOR $45,000

George A. Albright, a train dispatcher for the Southern Pacific railway formerly stationed at Redding, Calif., Friday filed suit in the circuit court for $45,000 damages, and $1,805.04 special damages, against Kathleen Smith, and Ella C. Westerlund, Carl Y. Tengwald, and Joe C. Brown, as trustees of the will of the late John A. Westerlund, as the result of an elevator accident in the Holland Hotel, this city, on the evening of February 28, 1925.

Albright alleges that while registering with his wife, his 29 months old son, George A. Albright, went into the elevator, and started it. That his wife, seeing the child rushed to the rescue, and he followed, believing his wife and child in danger. While attempting to get into the elevator, and stopping it, he slipped, and his right leg was caught between the door and the floor of the elevator, crushing and mangling the leg, and causing him to remain in a hospital for six months.

Albright further alleges that as a result of the accident he will be a cripple for life.

It is further alleged in the complaint that the hotel was "negligent, careless, and reckless," in not having an operative at the door, or in keeping the door closed, and in not equipping the elevator with automatic safety devices.

He further charges that the elevator and the mechanism thereof, is "attractive and dangerous" to children.

Kathleen Smith is named as a defendant in the suit, as the wife of the lessee of the hotel at the time of the accident.
