A Tehama county, Calif., brat was given a much-needed hiding by a schoolma'am. It hurt three women's clubs worse than it did the parents, who are standing by the schoolma'am in the attendant community upheaval.

A beany flapjack, folded up like a Corona typewriter for devouring, substituted this am. about half way to its destination.

The burg has recovered from a boom for civic clubs and gas shon.

It looks like the Salem uplifters who were shocked by the Maypole dances last spring, would get perturbed about the impending hanging at the state prison.

A DOUBLE TRAGEDY (Montague, Calif., Messenger) Russell Rattiff had the misfortune to have a maddle mare get its leg broken last week and had to be killed.

Our telegrapher thinks it is the height of something for the Uofo, football team whose general all-around helplessness is three degrees below zero, the Democratic party, and the Portland ball team, to be afraid the University of California will steal their signals in the game with Pacific college tomorrow. The California team will not play blindfolded, with their hands tied behind them.

The coroner's jury brought in a verdict that deceased was negligent in asking C. C. Lemmon the price of pears, in the eighth inning.

After being pumped full of stalwart virtues by the metropolitan press, Mr. Thompson, a Portland banker, retires from the senatorial fray for all, with dull and sickening thud, first administering a swift kick to the southeast pocket of the primary system. Mr. Thompson was rapidly becoming an angel when knots that looked like horns, started to grow on his brow.

WHERE'S MY AD FINITUM? (Pendleton East Oregonian) Boardman is to have a golf club and shortly we shall expect to hear such expressions as "around in pair," a bridge, try the niblick tee and ad finitum, by the Boardman residents.

A Main Stem cat was killed last night by curiosity. The autoist was curious to know if he could hit the cat.

It's a cruel world. A lady fainted from hunger on the streets of Tacoma, Wash., and somebody stole a pair of chiffon socks she had just purchased.

If there is a hell, it is full of baritone snorers.

Ever so often, some supervisor of Mankind arises and denounces flitting. This is a waste of wind. The latest to voice his disgust is Willie Sunday, who battles Satan by turning handspindles, and kicking the rung out of a non-combatant chair.

SHADE OF JOHN I: (SE, Examiner) Dempsey today is easily the ring's best dressed battler. The gorgeous Carpenter at his sartorial best was never his superior. The champion dresses in the most advanced modes, evidencing a definite passion for matching colors, to say nothing of hair oils and gracefully arched eyebrows.

TWO GREAT VICTORIES

THE Senators do not occupy the mourning bench alone this morning. They have distinguished company, although in the depth of their gloom they probably fail to recognize him.

This companion in misery is none other than Old Man Mars. For while the Washington warriors were walking the plank for the Pirate crew, as the rains from Heaven mixed with White House tears, the God of War was suffering an equally painful reverse over in Locarno, Switzerland.

And, one might add, equally unexpected. In fact, when the Locarno world series opened, wise and worldly men were backing Old Man Mars as at least a three to one favorite.

The dove of peace was scarcely given an outside chance to win. For there was the Treaty of Versailles on one hand, which the Germans would never accept and the Allies would never relinquish, and there was the Poland corridor on the other, which France was expected to insist upon and which Germany was certain to oppose to the bitter and sanguinary end.

It looked like a Martian slaughter, not on the dot, so to speak, but eventually. As in Pittsburg, however, so at Locarno, the unexpected happened. The thing that had never happened before in all similar conferences since the war, suddenly happened there.

It is, of course, too early to consign Old Man Mars definitely to the undertaker. Until the full text of the security pact is known, and final action taken, the impulse to crown the Dove of Peace should be restrained.

But enough is known to justify the claim that the 15th of October, 1925, will go down in European history as an important and epoch making day as the same date in the sporting history of Pittsburg, Penn.—which, one might add in the popular vernacular—is going some.

Old Man Mars has been knocked down by enlightened and generous statesmanship. That much is certain. Whether he has been knocked out is, of course, another matter.

But as in Pittsburg today, so in Locarno, sufficient unto the day are good tidings thereof.

QUILL POINTS

"Home Sweet Home" is touching, but there should be one verse about the garage.

The picnic season is over now, except for the chap who is a wizard at end runs.

A loyal American is one who gets mad when an alien cusses the institutions he cusses.

Well, what if Wales doesn't marry? A traveling man has very little home life, anyway.

It isn't a "city" until it quits being proud of the number of cars in town on Saturday.

Among those spurred on by adversity is the stork. Chicago has passed the three million mark.

Still, with all its faults, prohibition doesn't seem to affect those who really wish to remain sober.

HEALING DOPE

JOHNSON'S Duplex Rhubarb Essence has encouraged juvenescence. I am feeling younger, stronger, than I felt some weeks ago; divers pains that seemed undying, sundry aches that kept me sighing, have departed from my bosom, from my shoulderblade and toe. In the morning, when I'm hollow, and before each meal I swallow half a pint of Johnson's Essence, and it fits me for the fray; once my step was slow and halting but today you see me vaulting, over hedges, trees and fences, like a chamois blithe and gay. Old Doc Doodle says, "By thunder, often I'm impelled to wonder how a man of your attainments can be fooled by dope like that; rhubarb has no healing virtue; when I say it may not hurt you, I have given praise sufficient, it's a fake, inert and flat. Take a million tons and press it, take the juice and deftly dress it in all sorts of gaudy labels, and no ailment will it heal; yet this dope you are confaming, and its merits you are booming, boosting it to all and sundry, telling men how good you feel. "You are wise and scientific," I remark in tones pacific, "and my faith in Rhubarb Essence may be purely a mistake; but if I believe it's curing all my ailments long enduring, little does it matter whether it's a blessing or a fake. If my spavins are receding, if my gumbolls cease their bleeding, if I've no ingrowing whiskers while this Essence I consume, all the doctors may denounce me, wordy scientists may trounce me, but I'll swig the helpful Essence, and its virtues I will boom."

More Asthmatic Wheezes.

Real, bronchial or spasmodic asthma is a protean and perhaps in most cases a protein problem, like urticaria, commonly called hives, a blood relative of asthma, both asthma and hives being so to speak stirred by Allergy and damped by Anaphylaxis.

The protein substance usually responsible for asthma or hives is a foreign one, that is, a protein which is not normally produced in the body and not normally acceptable to the body as food or otherwise. Moreover it is probable that the foreign protein which is responsible for the reaction we recognize as asthma or as hives gains entrance to the blood through some abnormal route, and not thru the regular or normal process of digestion. When the foreign protein is a food protein, say white of egg, or the protein of strawberries or of lobster, it probably gains entrance to the blood by absorption through some lesion such as an ulcer in the stomach or intestine or through the normal process of food absorption but in an incompletely digested stage. Other abnormal routes by which protein material may enter the blood are inhalation (say of the dander of feather dust of an animal or fowl); possibly direct penetration of the mucous membrane of the nose by the sharp or spikled pollen granules (in hay fever particularly); and sometimes by hypodermic injection, say in the anaphylaxis or allergy or protein poisoning sometimes produced by a dose of antitoxin or serum. Finally, scientific research students hold that the origin of the foregoing or abnormal protein in some instances is an abnormal putrefaction or decomposition in the gastro-intestinal tract—a genuine illustration of a state which is ordinarily only theoretical, auto-intoxication; but this auto-intoxication hypothesis that the guilty protein poison is produced by bacterial activity in some focus of infection.

Not Enough Wheeze or Sneeze

Difficulty of breathing, with more or less wheezing, is a feature of several common disease conditions which it will do no good to enumerate. It takes more than a mere wheeze to make a case of real asthma, just as it requires more than a habit of sneezing and watering at the eyes or nose to constitute hay fever.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Removal of Axillary Hair Kindly tell me if it is dangerous to shave under the arms, etc. (V. V.) Answer.—There is no objection to shaving of the hair from the armpits.

Calcium Recently you gave a list of phosphorus foods. Will you kindly give a list of foods which are rich in calcium? (M. H. G.) Answer.—Cheese, milk, dried beans, almonds, egg yolk, carrots, cabbage, oatmeal, turnips, peanuts, oranges, chocolate, prunes, are rich in calcium.

Hexylresorcinol I read a newspaper item recently about the discovery of a new kidney cure by Dr. Beader Leonard of Johns Hopkins hospital. This new antiseptic is named hexylresorcinol. I would like to know if it is being used by doctors and in hospitals and if it can be obtained in drug stores. (Mrs. D. N. J.) Answer.—It is an antiseptic which seems to have actual germicidal power when eliminated in the urine that is, it destroys germs in the urine. It is not a kidney cure. I believe it is obtainable only by physicians. It is still under trial.

Tuberculosis I am to handle the financing of a large hospital to be built in Arizona in 1926 for tuberculosis patients. I understand financing but I don't know much about tuberculosis work.

THE DATE TREE

October 16, 1793—132 years ago—This was the day on which Marie Antoinette, Queen of Louis XVI., was guillotined at Paris. Coming as a bride of 15 to the profligate French court, Antoinette by her shameless extravagance early incurred the hatred of her starving subjects. Hearing of her purchase of the diamond necklace at a cost to the treasury of 1,800,000 francs, they imprisoned her at the outbreak of the Reign of Terror and after eight weeks of brutality she was arraigned before the Tribunal. Here she bore herself with dignity and resignation and after two days and nights of questioning received her sentence.

Coffee Heart Is there such a condition as "coffee heart"? What effect, if any, has excessive coffee drinking on the heart? (D. B. L.)

Answer.—Yes. Coffee raises blood pressure, stimulates the heart nerve, and increases the pulse rate. Too much often produces palpitation and tachycardia—to give too rapid pulse an alarming name. All this is due to the alkaloid, caffeine, in coffee. One cupful of coffee contains a pretty fair medicinal dose of this heart stimulant alkaloid. When you take more than two or three cups of coffee in a day you are taking too much for the good of your health. It is because of this stimulating effect of coffee on the heart, but even more because of its stimulation of the brain and the kidneys, that coffee should not be given to children under 16, and to some invalids.
