

WARDEN STATES MURRAY WAS AN INFORMER ALSO

SALEM, Ore., Oct. 20.—Tom Murray, convict sentenced to hang for the murder of Prison Guard James Sweeney, was just such an informer or "stool" as by his testimony in his own trial he feared might "frame" on him and cause him to be confined in the bull pen. Warden A. M. Dalrymple told the jury trying James Willos and Ellsworth Kelley, indicted jointly with Murray for the murder of Sweeney.

Under direct examination of District Attorney John Carson, the warden testified that two or three months prior to the break of August 12, Murray informed Deputy Warden Lillie that a group of seven or eight convicts were planning a break and named C. R. Moore as their leader.

"As the deputy warden reported it to me, Murray told him that the convicts planned to make the break on a Sunday morning. They were going to seize the warden in the chapel as he went in for his regular Sunday morning interview with prisoners, put a knife to his neck and under the threat of killing him force the chapel guards to open the doors of the 'cage' leading into the turnkey's office. There they planned to take guns from the arsenal and force their way out of the prison."

Kelley, Willos, Bert (Oregon) Jones and Frank Fallon were some of the other convicts whom Murray told the deputy warden were implicated in the plot.

Most of the evidence so far presented by the state has been identical to that which was brought out in the Murray trial, for Willos and Kelley are being tried now as accomplices in the murder of Sweeney and not on the separate indictment which charges them with the killing of Holman.

Peter J. White, one of the guards who was in the turnkey's office at the time Murray and Jones entered and demanded the keys to the arsenal, testified that when he escaped from the office he started on the run for the front gate. There, he said, he met Guard Charlton, who was trying to get in. He said that Charlton called his attention to Willos and Kelley, who were then coming down the rope from the roof and that he (White) rushed over to the bottom of the rope and commanded the two convicts to stand still and put up their hands.

"Kelley put his hands up, all right," said White, "but Willos said 'Who the hell are you?' and started south toward tower seven."

"I told him I was Pete White and just then Guard McKinley came out of the barber shop and Willos stopped and put his hands up."

Asked if either Kelley or Willos said anything while they were standing there, White replied:

"Yes, Kelley said, 'Gee, Pete, I didn't think it would be as bad as this.'"

White said that the shooting was going on then and that almost immediately Jones appeared around the corner of the building, covered him with a rifle and said to Kelley and Willos: "Go into the arsenal—it's open."

Jones then said to White: "G—d—n you, open that gate!"

White said he replied: "How the hell can I when I'm locked in here myself?"

QUACK DOCTORING STILL FLOURISHES IN UNITED STATES

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(A. P.)—Quack doctoring, an ancient craft, still flourishes to an incredible extent in this age of touted public intelligence, said Dr. Arthur J. Cramp, director of the Bureau of Investigation of the American Medical Association. He spoke to officers of the American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology, which starts its annual convention here today.

"There are styles in quackery," he asserted. "The prevailing modes of the current season are those products sold for alleged rejuvenation. They range from glandular substance of ring-tailed monkeys to radium emanations dissolved in drinking water."

"But in quackery there are certain old standbys that, like Tennyson's brook, 'go on forever.' For such are consumption and cancer cures; the epilepsy and rupture cures; the female weaknesses and weak men cures; cures for fatness and leanness; the quacks who will fit glasses on no other data than your age and ability to pay the bill and the faker who will sweepingly promise to cure deafness of whatever origin."

"Quacks may be divided into two general classes: Those who sell a more or less elaborate but worthless course of treatment and those who dispose of trivial, worthless, often dangerous devices at exorbitant prices."

"Virtually all of these widely advertised cures are sheer medical fakery. The testimonials, bulletins and other paraphernalia are usually made from whole cloth."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 20.—(A. P.) The engineering corps of the United States army has decided to extend the jetty in the mouth of the Umpqua river in Oregon so that the flow of water in that stream will scour away the sand bar impeding navigation at that point. An allotment of $4,000 for this project was authorized today from existing river and harbor improvement funds.

LOCAL WARRIORS PRACTICING HARD FOR G. PASS GAME

With three victories under their belts, the Medford high school football team Monday evening began hard work for the final games of the season. Coach Callison pointed out the errors in the Klamath game to his charges, and announced that no position was secure for anyone, and that only machine football would win letters. Thirty-two players still turn out for practice, and scrimmages for perfection of charging, bucking, and forward passing will be held all week.

The locals play Grants Pass next Saturday, and the Josephine county aggregation promises a hard battle.

The following Saturday the locals play Marshfield here, and outside of the Ashland contests, this will be the biggest game of the year from the standpoint of local interest. Marshfield is expected to give Medford a hard nose, as they have an experienced line and backfield, and have won all their games this season by big scores. Three hundred fans are expected to attend from Coos Bay.

The fence at the athletic grounds will be completed for this game.

CHARLEY HALL TO BE A CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNORSHIP

SALEM, Ore., Oct. 20.—Assessing that he is now assured "sufficient support to assure my nomination," State Senator Charles Hall, of Marshfield, writes to a friend in Salem that he will be a candidate for the republican nomination for governor in the primary election of next spring unless personal business matters make it impracticable for him to do so.

"During the months I have been considering the matter since it was first broached by my friends I have become convinced that I would have sufficient support to insure my nomination," writes Senator Hall.

"The assurances I have, and the available and obvious support, is sufficient but the decision will rest upon the determination of personal business matters."

Senator Hall intimates that he will go before the voters as a businessman and pledging a business administration of state affairs if he is nominated and elected.

In the republican primary of 1922 Senator Hall was defeated for the nomination by Ben Olcott by only a few hundred votes and this vote he considers the nucleus of the strength he could marshal in another campaign.

bean governments to give serious attention to the president's hint.

CHICAGO, Oct. 20.—(A. P.)—Senator William E. Borah, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, today expressed the belief that the Locarno treaty would relieve settling world affairs, but said he did not share "the unwarranted enthusiasm of extremists."

He declared he was glad Locarno had struck a blow at the world court.

Senator Borah came to address the Women's Roosevelt Republican club tonight, virtually to open a campaign opposing the world court.

"By creating a permanent conciliation council the Locarno diplomats showed, I believe, that their faith in the world court as an agent of arbitration is not great," he said. "I have more faith in the permanent council. Under it the nations at variance are to have power in appointing arbitrators. Nations, therefore, will be more willing to arbitrate than they are under the world court."

"The Locarno pacts tend to break the Versailles treaty which has kept hate alive in Europe since the war. Whatever the break in the Versailles treaty, it is a boon to humanity. Perhaps the most significant fact of all was the harmony of the nations in working out a common plan."

U. S. COURT CLOSES, LAST CASE RULED OUT BY JUDGE

The damage suit filed against Clement Bradbury of Klamath Falls by C. F. Garber of Grants Pass for approximately $1600 was dismissed today by Judge Wolverton in the federal court, where it was being heard, because of the lack of jurisdiction.

The suit originally called for $6000 damages, alleging conversion of grain, $5000 of which was for punitive damages. This was, however, stricken off before reaching the federal court. The plaintiff's counsel did not amend the claim so as to read $6000. The federal court has no jurisdiction over damage suits less than $3000. With this fact the plaintiff was unfamiliar, it is said.

The court officials, Judge Wolverton, Miss Margaret Fleming, secretary; P. M. Brown, clerk, and Harry V. Reed, chief United States deputy marshal, will leave this evening for their headquarters at Portland, after having spent over two weeks here in connection with the court session.

PORTLAND MAN FINDS MISSING FAMILY AT LAST

BOULDER, Colo., Oct. 20.—(A. P.) E. B. Hodges' pursuit of his family from Oregon ended here last night when he found his divorced wife, Alice Hodges, in possession of their four children whom a Portland court had awarded to the husband. Upon petition of Hodges, County Judge J. J. Ingram of Boulder, issued an order giving two of the children into the custody of the sheriff until a hearing October 26.

The four children, aged 2, 7, 9 and 13 were awarded to the husband in Portland when a final decree of divorce was entered in his favor. Mrs. Hodges is alleged to have escaped with them to Boulder. She placed two of the children in custody of John L. McMenamin, superintendent of the state home for dependent children in Denver. Hodges learned at Ontario, Ore., that his divorced wife had transferred school credits of the children from that place to Denver and traced her to Colorado.

O. A. C. IS PRACTICING BEHIND LOCKED GATES, JIM DIXON O. K. AGAIN

CORVALLIS, Ore., Oct. 20.—Behind locked gates the Oregon Agricultural college football team worked for two hours last night perfecting plays which they hope will bring victory over Stanford Saturday. Coach Schissler's two backfield combinations were disrupted last evening after practice when Snider, fullback on the "big four" and Luby, flashy half for the "ponies," went to the hospital after falling to iron out in practice injuries received in the Whitman game. With them went Badley, first string guard. A desperate effort will be made to have them in shape by the time the team leaves but even so valuable practice will be lost.

Against this gloom is the recovery of Jim Dixon, Giant running mate of Dick Rosen at tackle. He has been working lightly with the squad for a week and will be in trim for Saturday.
