

OREGON ROOTERS CONFIDENT U. O. WILL BEAT BEARS

EUGENE, Ore., Oct. 23.—All pepped up and with a new fighting spirit instilled in their veins, the University of Oregon football men are ready today to embark for Portland where the University of California's Golden Bears will be faced tomorrow afternoon on Multnomah field.

A week ago, Oregon fans were willing to admit that California would wallop Oregon, hands down. Today however, that situation has changed. California isn't going to win, the Oregon backers say. Further than that they aver, Oregon is going to upset the score and take the long end of the rope.

Others, however, still shake their heads. Whatever the outcome will be, Oregon is putting into the field a team composed of her strongest football men. Captain Maule will be at right end; Kerns at right tackle; Bailey, right guard; Johnson, center; Shields, left guard; Sinclair, left tackle; Smith, left end; Anderson, quarter; Hogden, right half; Wetsel, left half; Jones, fullback.

It is a heavy team, the line averaging 180 or better, and the backfield just as heavy. Team play is all that Oregon needs, the critics say. She has the material, but in the Idaho game she played ragged football.

Secret practice, however, is supposed to have ironed out the lack of team play, this is why the Oregon rooters are so pepped up. Last year, they point out, after getting off to a bad start, the Oregon team beat Washington and surprised the whole coast. Why not California this year? they argue.

LODGE BOOK TELLS HOW NEAR LEAGUE CAME TO VICTORY

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—(A. P.) How republican leaders in the League of Nations fight escaped what they considered a trap to commit themselves beforehand to support of the covenant is one incident of the historic struggle disclosed for the first time by the late Henry Cabot Lodge, one of its dominant figures, in a book written a month before his death and given to the public today.

Entitled "The Senate and the League of Nations," the volume, placed on sale by Scribner's as copyright holder, is in the main a record for posterity of the already known history of the bitter-end struggle between Woodrow Wilson and the senate opposition. But the opposition leader is outspoken in his personal characterizations of the war president, upon whom he lays full responsibility in his unending attitude for the league's defeat.

Although he had worked and voted for ratification of the league with reservations, in the end, Mr. Lodge says, he was thankful that it had been defeated. He views the league as having in practice thus far proved futile for the ostensible purpose of its creation.

A Pretty Sight in the Heavens To the Editor: Those readers of the Mail Tribune who are not accustomed to looking at the stars have an opportunity at the present time to take a first simple lesson in astronomy. Doubtless all have noticed the very bright star which now shows in the southwest in the early evening, the planet Venus, the star of love, the brightest star in the heavens. A little further to the east another bright star appears, a close rival of Venus, the planet Jupiter. Some have doubtless noticed that Jupiter appears a little further west every evening, due to the earth's more rapid movement eastward. Venus is now coming around from behind the sun moving more rapidly than the earth and therefor appears a little further east each evening. As a consequence these two bright planets are rapidly approaching each other. This will continue until the 26th of November, when the two stars will be in conjunction, that is, a line drawn from the North Star would pass through them both. It is possible that they may pass so close together as to appear as a single star.

On the 19th of November the new moon will pass Venus and on the 20th will pass Jupiter. And it is possible that the moon may pass between us and either planet shutting off their light. Altho the moon and planets wander only a few degrees north or south of the plane of the ecliptic yet how seldom do we see the moon pass before one of the planets! The writer, at the age of 55 can remember of seeing it only once. It makes an interesting guess each month as the moon approaches one of the planets to attempt to tell whether it will go to the north or to the south, or pass directly in front.

When the moon comes around again in December it will pass Jupiter first, on the 17th and pass Venus on the 18th, the order being reversed from the November position, these two bright stars and the moon so close together making a very brilliant display in that part of the heavens.

Perhaps some reader is sufficiently interested to ask, How do you know that? The answer is simple, just by reading the almanac. However it takes some study to be able to read the symbols used to denote the various planets and their positions. Jayne's is the one I use. They do not all give these facts.

WESTERLUND ESTATE FILES A DEMURRER

A demurrer was filed in the circuit court Thursday by Mrs. Katherine Smith, Mrs. John A. Westerlund, Carl Y. Tengwald and J. C. Brown, as trustees of the estate of the late John A. Westerlund, against the damage suit of G. A. Albright, a train dispatcher, for $45,000 damages, on the grounds of "insufficient grounds to constitute a cause for action." Albright sued as a result of an elevator accident in February, 1925, in which he was injured while attempting to stop the lift after his son had started it in childish play.

Gish Sisters, Hunt's Craterian. "Romola," with the Gish sisters and a notable supporting cast opened a two days engagement at the Hunt's Craterian yesterday.

It was photographed for the most part in the wondrous locale of the narrative itself; it is magnificently costumed and played with admirable discretion and intelligence.

"Romola" tells one of the most dramatic stories ever conceived—filled with intrigue, romance and the thunders of vengeance from an outraged God, following the crucifixion of Savonarola and the debauchery of "the most beautifully ornamented city on earth."

Lillian Gish as Romola and Dorothy as the little peasant girl Hessa do excellent work as does Charles Lane in the role of Baldassarre Calvo—foster father of the weak, wicked and unscrupulous Tito. Herbert Grimwood as Savonarola, William H. Powell as Tito, Ronald Colman as Carlo Buicelli and Bonaventura Ibanez as Bardi, the blind philosopher and father of Romola.

Exciting Film in Rialto. The Rialto theater management announces one of the most unusual films ever shown in the city call "White Man," now being shown.

The story has an interesting start when an aristocratic English girl flies in an aeroplane with an aviator she has never seen, rather than marry a man she does not love. This perilous journey terminates in the jungles of Africa where adventures follow each other in quick succession. An elephant hunt, a spectacular forest fire are a few of the stirring happenings. Alice Joyce, makes her return to pictures in this vehicle. Kenneth Harlan in the same role has found a part superior even to "The Virginian," in which he scored such a marked triumph last season.

Drama of Topics in Film. "As Man Desires," the new feature attraction at Hunt's Craterian theater tomorrow matinee and night only, has two vital figures in its story—which is an adaptation of Gene Wright's novel "Fidora La Croix"—Major John Craig, misanthrope through the falsity of woman, and Pan, a South sea islander girl. These characters are played by Milton Sills and Viola Dana.

This well schooled young actress is making a new reputation for herself in serious and semi-serious characterizations, her Pan being the best thing in this line she has yet done. She is simple, unadorned, mild child of the tropics, with no morals to speak of, and unashamed, but her affections, once engaged, stick like a plaster. Her Pan is a distinct achievement.
