

WHITE SLAVERY TALK TONIGHT TO CLOSE MEETINGS

Those who heard the Rev. N. Wayne Phelps last night at the First Methodist Episcopal church on the subject "The Woman All the World Loves," were not disappointed in the man or his message. He fully lived up to his reputation.

In a very forceful and telling way he glorified motherhood, vigorously maintaining that her rightful place is in the home and not in the commercial world. He stated that it was in the home where her Godly influence is indispensable to the moral and spiritual life of our modern civilization, and if we are to be saved from the subtle influence that seeks to destroy the home, motherhood must be queen in the home.

In a wonderfully striking and logical way he disclosed the modern evils and practices that are destroying the home and bringing about a condition of things greatly to be deplored and that if allowed to continue, will ultimately mean the wrecking of the home.

He closed his lecture with a passionate appeal for the purity of womanhood, the sanctity of the home, loyalty to our institutions and a patriotic devotion to our country.

His last lecture will be given in the First Christian church tonight, when he will discuss "White Slavery and Moral Crime."

MRS. ALFORD'S WILL FILED FOR PROBATE

The will of Mrs. Catherine C. Alford, pioneer woman of Jackson county, was filed in the probate court. The will was signed November 19, 1921, and Mrs. Laura Willits is named executrix. The estimated value of the property is $4500.

The will provides that bequests of undivided one-fourth interests go to Russell L. Alford and Mrs. Laura A. Willits, son and daughter, and a bequest of $5 to Moses L. Alford, a son. A one-fourth undivided interest is left to Eva Pollott, a grand daughter, and to Chester C. Wolters, a grand-son. The remainder of the estate is left to Herbert L. Alford, a grand-son.

Pacific International Livestock Show

The chances are that at this year's Pacific International Livestock show at Portland, October 31st to November 7th, will see the most wonderful showing of horses, cattle, horse shows and poultry seen anywhere, at least west of the Mississippi river. The Pacific International is rapidly becoming known as the premier show of the west. Keen competition is becoming common in all of the prominent breeding, proving that all of the different types of stock are coming into their own. With good stiff showings from California, also from up in Washington and Utah, it does look as if they are going to have the biggest display of all, and its justified because the premiums are large in all the different kinds of stock.

The Land Product show, under the management of C. D. Minton, has become one of the stellar attractions of the Pacific International. This year, joined with the hay and grain, will find it very strong in every way and full of inspiration and interest to people from all parts of the country.
