

GRANGE AT EAGLE POINT WILL MEET DECEMBER FIRST

EAGLE POINT, Nov. 17.—The Eagle Point Grange shows a steady increase in both membership as well as interest. The developments of the last few weeks lead one to believe that much real work will be accomplished during the coming year. The farmers are beginning to realize the great need of organization. It is a noteworthy fact that the majority of our Grange members are among the most conservative of our farmers, the kind that think twice before they leap, and because of that fact, one can rest assured that any business done by the Grange will be on a safe and sane basis. Every farmer would be benefited by attending these Grange meetings and hearing the talks and discussions, all of which are of vital interest to him. He and his family would also be rested and entertained by other features of the program and by the social hour afterwards. Besides, we need every farmer and family in the community in order to do the best work possible.

The last regular business meeting of the Grange was held at the hall on Tuesday evening, November 3. While it was a stormy night, a goodly number were there and an interesting evening was had. By-laws were recommended, amended and adopted. Ross Kline gave an interesting talk on a special subject. Mr. Kline will continue the talk at the next meeting. Delicious hot tamales with chili and good hot coffee were served by the hostesses for the evening, Mrs. Mitchell, Mrs. Cowden and Mrs. Throckmorton.

A box social and dance was given by the entertainment committee of the Grange at the hall on the night of October 20. A good time was had by those that attended. Mr. and Mrs. Ed Cowden furnished the music.

A very fine little baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Smith on October 27. Mother and baby are doing fine, also the father, judging from appearance.

A high-class entertainment was given Monday night by the well known and highly recommended impersonator, Mrs. Johnson. Between program numbers some very fine musical numbers were rendered by local talent.

The next business meeting of the Grange will be held on Tuesday evening, December 1. A good program is promised and the annual election of officers will be held, so every member should make it a point to be there, regardless of weather conditions. If you want a change of officers, come and help put them in. If you want the same officers, come and help keep them in.

RHINELANDER BOY ADMITS INFATUATION WITH NEGRO WIFE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Nov. 17.—(A. P.) Leonard Kip Rhineland, who was infatuated with Alice Beatrice Jones, his part negro bride, pursued her within a few weeks of meeting her and took the initiative in their relations, although at first he had no intention of marrying her.

These admissions were made today by the wealthy son of an aristocratic Huguenot family in the course of a long series of contradictory answers under cross-examination by Lee Parsons Davis, counsel for Mrs. Rhineland, in Rhineland's annulment suit.

A series of questions on a letter sent by Leonard to his future wife in September, 1921, brought out the story of his infatuation. The letter was the first of a mass of missives that Mr. Davis has threatened to introduce. It told of young Rhineland's loneliness and was filled with many endearing terms.

"Are these the terms a man would use if he were not in love with a woman," asked Davis.

"I was infatuated with her and enjoyed her association," Rhineland responded.

Young Rhineland admitted that he had taken the initiative in the love making but insisted that he had had no previous experience with women.

Rhineland admitted that he had lived with his wife several days after the newspapers had called her a negro. Several times before their marriage he testified, "Alice told him she was white."

She Prefers Crime.—Mrs. Gertrude Atherton is glad to be back from Europe "in the land of crime." When she read American papers abroad they appeared to contain nothing but crime news.

STANFIELD'S AIDE SPEAKS IN FAVOR OREGON BULB MEN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—American bulb growers today began presenting arguments before the department of agriculture on the quarantine against foreign bulbs scheduled to become effective January 1.

They sought to show that the American bulb growing industry within a short time will be able to supply the domestic demand for the narcissus and other groups which would be shut out by the embargo. The growers were almost unanimous in declaring the kinds of bulbs involved can be successfully grown in many parts of the United States and that there has been sufficient plantings to assure an almost adequate supply for next year.

E. J. Adams of Eugene, Ore., representing Senator Stanfield of that state, expressed the senator's opposition to withdrawing the quarantine order.

Frank C. Riggs, a bulb grower of Portland and chairman of the Portland Rose festival, pointed to the spread in his state of the ear-wig, the plant pest, which has reached a menacing stage since it first was noticed several years ago. He declared this was indicative of what might occur as a result of importation of bulb pests.

New School Bill For Washington Is Introduced

OLYMPIA, Wash., Nov. 17.—(A. P.)—A measure requiring all private and parochial schools in Washington, wherein children between seven and sixteen are taught the eight grammar grades, to use only textbooks and follow courses of instruction used in grammar public schools, was introduced today by Representative Egbert of Pierce county.

Egbert also introduced a measure providing that no persons shall be qualified as a teacher who does not hold a teacher's certificate or diploma. Another bill by Egbert would require reading of at least ten verses of the Bible in public schools each day. Pupils above the fourth grade would be required to learn the ten commandments.

Lost Men Found.—LONGVIEW, Wash., Nov. 17.—(A. P.) A. H. Gordon and Ralph Burchett, Kelson men lost in the woods since early Saturday, found their way to the Barr Logging company camp late yesterday.

JUDGE COERCES WIDOW

that the Shenandoah flight was a political flight, and urged her aunt not to let her "make a long statement."

The witness continued: "Then Captain Foley said to my uncle: 'I'm afraid Mrs. Lansdowne is going to make a very difficult witness.'"

"My uncle replied: 'No, she is going to tell the truth and that should not give you any trouble.' That was good night. The conversation ended there."

She then told of receiving the next day the celebrated statement from Captain Foley, which she understood she was to read to the court.

Told Col. Mitchell Mrs. Lansdowne testified that she came to the opinion that there was an effort by the court to "whitewash" the Shenandoah accident and that she had voluntarily told Colonel William Mitchell that Captain Foley had sought to influence her testimony before the Shenandoah court.

She said she had been pursued by the navy about her statement and had made up her mind when the court began inquiry into her husband's posthumous article in the Saturday Evening Post, that it was to be "war to the finish," with the navy.

Her opinion that the Shenandoah inquiry was a whitewash was based on several things, Mrs. Lansdowne testified.

"There was the effort to sway my testimony and make me in a subtle manner retract the statement I had made," she declared.

"The court was trying to place the blame on someone who could not speak back and had stooped to trying to sway the widow of that person."

Questioned sentence by sentence concerning her first statement about the Shenandoah wreck as it was published, the witness responded with such expressions as: "It's a lie," "absolutely untrue," "I never said that."

She was very emphatic in her denial of the statement attributed to her that her husband had been very nervous about the western trip.

Writer Testifies.—The first witness was Charles B. Parmor, whose name was signed to news stories regarding Mrs. Lansdowne, recently distributed to newspapers by the Universal Service.

Parmor identified himself as a newspaper writer and said he wrote a published article quoting Mrs. Lansdowne as charging that Captain Foley, as judge advocate of the Shenandoah court, tried to influence her. The article was published before the widow had given testimony on the subject before the Mitchell court martial.

"What is the source of that article?" asked Major Henry Leonard, who replaced Captain Foley as judge advocate.

"It is an interview with Mrs. Zachary Lansdowne," Parmor replied. He said also that some of the information came from a press release from the navy department. He declared the widow told him "there was an attempt to have me give—well, false testimony."

Examination of the witness was halted while Captain Foley was summoned and formally made a defendant in the inquiry. He took his place in court with the other interested parties—survivors of the Shenandoah crash—and was given the right to counsel. James S. Easby-Smith was introduced as counsel for the former judge advocate.

Evidence is Stricken.—Taking over cross-examination of Parmor, Easby-Smith asked whether Mrs. Lansdowne said her husband had regarded the mid-western trip of the Shenandoah as for political purposes.

The witness replied in the affirmative, adding: "She said he was willing to obey orders. He did obey orders. He did obey them."

The last sentence was stricken from the record on objection of Easby-Smith.

Pressed to be specific as to the charge of attempted influence, Parmor quoted Mrs. Lansdowne as saying Foley had sought to have her testify falsely as to several things.

She said it was more or less Captain Foley's manner that led her to believe that he was trying to get her to testify as she said falsely, added the witness.

Parmor said that at the time he wrote the story he "liked Captain Foley" but that he now was "preferring charges of conduct unbecoming an officer" against the captain.

"Then you are here as a witness who has brought charges against Captain Foley?" asked Easby-Smith.

There was no reply.
