

KING TUT CAN'T BE MOVED FROM HIS GOLD COFFIN

CAIRO, Nov. 20.—(A.P.)—The condition of the mummy of Tut-Ankhamun has been found to be such that it will be impossible to remove it from its gold coffin. Doctors Derry and Saleh Hamdi announced today in a report on the unwrapping of the mummy, which has occupied seven days.

The experts announce that the mummy is firmly glued to the bottom of its gold coffin with a dried pitch-like material. The mask reaching to the upper part of the throat is also fixed to the coffin, making the removal of the mummy impossible. It also will be futile to attempt to make X-ray pictures on account of the numerous layers of gold and other materials covering the body to the knees.

A form of spontaneous combustion was found to have destroyed some of the bandages, causing the skin and underlying tissues to become extremely thin and brittle.

This condition exposed certain joints, enabling the age of the king at the time of his death to be estimated fairly accurately at about eighteen years.

The king evidently was of slight build and the belief of the experts that the statues and effigies already found are really portraits finds confirmation in the face, which now is exposed.

The report says that the objects found with the body may be classified in three categories—amulets, or objects pertaining to charms; royal objects and personal belongings. These objects have made it possible to reconstitute the whole royal regalia of the 18th dynasty. The refined taste displayed in the jewelry equals anything previously known, the experts report.

The most important objects discovered with the body are:

On the head, a royal diadem with insignia of vulture and serpent.

Around the neck, amuletic figures and divinites.

On the chest numerous pectorals, including various amulets in sixteen layers. Of these some comprise many hundreds of sections of elaborate enameled cloisonne work.

On the arms, eleven magnificent bracelets.

Besides those on the hands there are thirteen massive finger rings of various materials.

Around the waist two girdles to which are suspended two daggers.

About the limbs a royal apron composed of sections of inlaid gold work.

Upon the feet golden funerary sandals. Each toe was encased in a gold sheath.

In addition a great number of amulets were found, the object of these being to protect the pharaoh in his journey through the underworld. No traces of documents have been discovered.
