EVEN MONEY IS BEING WAGERED ON CAL. CONTEST

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—California and Stanford will settle a football feud of 33 years' standing tomorrow when they meet at Palo Alto in their annual classic—the "big game."

Robbed somewhat of its glamour by the advent of Washington, whose powerful eleven eliminated both the Bears and Stanford's Cardinals from the Pacific coast conference race, the contest nevertheless promises to be the outstanding gridiron attraction of the far west.

The teams are evenly matched this year and straight money was being quoted today.

The seating capacity of Stanford stadium will be taxed to the limit as 'a' tickets, numbering approximately 75,000, were sold more than a month ago.

Another game attracting widespread interest is the intercollegiate clash at Los Angeles of Iowa and the University of Southern California. The fact that Coach Howard Jones of U. S. C. was mentor at Iowa before coming to the Pacific coast adds zest to the encounter.

Other conference games, besides the Bear-Cardinal tilt, brings together Idaho and the Oregon Aggies at Boise, Washington State college and Gonzaga university meet at Spokane in a Pacific northwest conference game.

Washington, whose championship claim to the coast conference title is disputed only by Oregon university, meets the College of Puget Sound at Tacoma. The game is expected to be only a warming up affair for the Huskies. On Thanksgiving day Washington plays Oregon at Seattle, and Oregon has not won a conference game this season.

The conference standings:

W.	L.	Pct.
Washington	4	0	1.000
Stanford	3	1	.750
California	2	1	.667
U. S. C.	2	1	.667
O. A. C.	2	1	.667
Idaho	2	2	.500
W. S. C.	1	3	.250
Montana	1	4	.200
Oregon	0	4	.000

BOTH HARVARD AND YALE CRIPPLED FOR EASTERN CLASSIC

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—Harvard and Yale football teams, both beaten by Princeton, are prepared for a finish battle in Harvard stadium tomorrow before a capacity throng which will include their Tiger conquerors.

Injuries affect both the old rivals about equally in their annual struggle, which features the eastern favorite of the day despite the fact that Harvard has fallen before Holy Cross, Dartmouth and Princeton, and Yale before Pennsylvania and Princeton.

Jack Stafford, the quarterback who piloted Harvard to a three to nothing victory over Brown a week ago, ending a string of defeats, is expected to remain on the side lines throughout the contest, having reported this week on crutches. Jack Maher of the back field and George Hogue, guard, are in poor condition.

Bunnell, Yale quarterback, an exceptionally good receiver of punts, may have to give way to the speedy Fishwick, while Cottle and Allen of the backfield are still suffering from injuries. Yale hopes are bolstered, however, by the return to the right side of the line of Ben Butterworth.

Two other clashes stand out in the waning season, that of Fordham and Georgetown at New York for the Catholic college championship, and that of Lafayette and Lehigh

RED GRANGE KEPT BUSY ANSWERING HOSTILE CHARGES

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—A harassed "Red" Grange led his Illinois football team into Columbus today to meet Ohio State in his last appearance on a collegiate gridiron.

At his heels followed the hubbub of charges, denials, and speculation regarding his future that has brought thousands of words into print and insomnia to his admirers.

Grange's latest reply to stories that had him playing professional football, in the movies, or selling his name as advertising, was vehement. "They have nothing on me. I have not received a penny. I am getting sick and tired of these constant rumors about my signing contracts to do this and the other."

His word was accepted by those who could make him ineligible for the game, from President Kinley of the University of Illinois to Major John L. Griffith, athletic commissioner of the "big ten."

HUSKIES MAY NOT GET A GAME AT PASADENA

SEATTLE, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—The opinion that the University of Washington will not be a participant in an east-west football game in the Rose Bowl at Pasadena, Cal., which on New Year's is to feature a Rose Tournament, was expressed today by Darwin Melness, graduate manager at Washington.

monarchy for 55 years. During all that time—throughout most of Alexander's life in England—Miss Knollys rendered service of striking devotion, receiving in return the deep affection of her royal mistress.

Perhaps there has been no parallel in the history of royal houses for such a long and loving association as theirs. The queen and Miss Knollys had grown old together and were almost inseparable, the latter being more a personal friend than a servant.

Rhineland City Mourns

SPEYER, Bavaria, Nov. 20.—(A. P.)—News of the illness of Dowager Queen Alexandra brought much sorrow to this little Rhineland city which always has felt a special interest in the Danish princess, since it was here in the Speyer cathedral, that she first met her future husband, the Prince of Wales, who later became King Edward VII.

Their meeting was on September 14, 1861, when Princess Alex, as all her childhood friends called her, was seventeen years old—a beautiful, tall and slender light-haired girl. She was dressed in crinoline and wore a quaint bonnet. The Prince of Wales who had only recently returned from a visit to the United States and Canada, was a slender chap, with sideburns, a small moustache and a goatee.

Met in Cathedral

The prince and the princess met as tourists in the ancient cathedral and were introduced by friends. The following day they again met at Heidelberg, and a year later their engagement was announced. At the time she was regarded as the only non-German princess eligible for the hand of the heir-apparent to the British throne.

The marriage of the couple always has been considered as having its effect upon Europe's hostilities during the half century following it. The hatred of the Danish royal household for the Hohenzollerns because of Prussian aggressions in Schleswig-Holstein is regarded by some Germans as an important factor in causing the break between Germany and Great Britain.

Germans Ruled Out

Both Queen Victoria and her daughter, the princess royal, had married German princes and Germany had expected the Prince of Wales to wed a daughter of Prince Albert of Prussia. But the English public and press objected to having all European royalty come from Germany and after Princess Alexandra had married the heir of the British throne, her sister, Princess Marie Dagmar, married the heir to the Romanoff throne in Russia, thus averting two royal matches which German princesses might have made with great political advantage to the Hohenzollerns.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—(A. P.) The Prince of Wales left Sandringham at 1:45 this afternoon.

SANDRINGHAM, England, Nov. 20.—(A. P.) The King and queen have been with Dowager Queen Alexandra since eleven o'clock this morning. Queen Maud of Norway, Alexandra's third daughter, arrived hurriedly at about one o'clock.

Shooting Party Called Off

King George broke up his shooting party at Sandringham, and the members, with the exception of Prince Arthur of Connaught, were leaving today. Before the departure of his guests the king visited them and reported his mother's serious condition.

The Duke and Duchess of York are proceeding to Sandringham this afternoon, and the princess royal, has already gone. News of her majesty's turn for the worse and postponement of the Guild Hall banquet circulated slowly, with the result that expectant crowds gathered along the line announced for the Prince of Wales procession and massed about Guild Hall where the tables were all laid and the luncheon mostly cooked when the order for cancellation was received.

London was greatly saddened by the announcement that the queen mother's death might be expected at any hour.

"No person in the British Empire has done more work for it than that old lady," an elderly man remarked, when it was announced in a crowded bus that her condition had forced an abandonment of all festivities.

The American Ambassador, Allan Houghton, and the Spanish envoy called at Marlborough house during the forenoon to learn of the royal patient's condition.
