PEOPLE REALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR CRIME INCREASE

CHICAGO, Mar. 19.—(AP) Thirty-three years on the bench have convinced Judge Marcus Kavanaugh of two things:

(1) That there are 350,000 persons in the United States who live partly or wholly by crime, who committed 12,000 murders last year and who obtained illegally in the same period enough money to pay for the building of the Panama canal.

(2) That there are simple methods of relief available if only the public would insist upon their adoption. Judge Kavanaugh, who sits upon the superior court bench, has based his opinions not only upon his long experience but upon three years of intensive study of the crime situation.

Chief responsibility, however, he attaches to the public for indifference. A country, he declares, earns the crime it suffers. "Public apathy, quibbling courts of review, antiquated processes, and new procedures designed to protect the criminal rather than the public," are some of his criticisms.

CHILDREN'S POISONING MYSTERY

Michigan City, Ind., police have been investigating the death of two children, said to have been poisoned by carbolic or oxalic acid. Richard Doehle, 4, and his sister, Orville, 2, were the victims. Since the children died, their uncle, William Sims, has been stricken, adding to the mystery.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case is mentioned as an example of how Judge Kavanaugh believes the present court system delays justice which, he holds, should be prompt to be most effective as a deterrent.

YESTERDAY WAS HOTTEST DAY OF YEAR IN VALLEY

Somewhat cooler weather prevailed today, with a minimum of 38 this morning, and the prediction is for cloudy and cooler weather tonight and Tuesday, following the warmest day of the year so far yesterday, with an official maximum of 81.

The unusually warm weather for this time of year not only hastened the development of the fruit and general vegetation, but lured Medford and other valley people by the hundreds on auto trips out to the hills to pick wild flowers and hold family and other group picnics and to the river and other streams to enjoy fishing or being near the water.

It was so warm that many boys and some older folks went in swimming at the Jackson Hot Springs pool, and reports were in circulation today that quite a number of other venturesome boys and young men enjoyed dips in streams throughout the county.

The temperatures up in the sixties last week and the unusual warmth of yesterday threw a scare into dilatory orchardists who had not yet prepared for smudging operations, to such an extent as to cause them to begin placing their smudge pots and the work of having briquets and other fuel hauled to the orchards.

Many more orchard thermometers were also brought in today and left at the weather bureau office for testing, to be added to the hundreds brought there for this purpose last week.

Although smudging time is approaching, as the early pear trees are in blossom already, and Floyd Young, the government forest expert, whose assistant, Mr. Rogers, arrived last week, is expected to come here tomorrow, it is understood that the general run of pear trees could withstand a frost of from 32 to 25 degrees without damage for about a week yet, but a temperature as low as 22 might result in considerable damage.

In a few isolated orchards some of the early D'Anjou blossoms are in the pink stage, including the Pankey orchard.

ASHLAND TOURNAMENT SO SUCCESSFUL TO BE REPEATED

ASHLAND, Mar. 19.—The first basketball championship tournament for secondary high schools has passed into history. Teams that have formerly had small incentive for their training had a chance to meet in a group of 21 teams in a live competition for prizes. The Southern Oregon Normal school has benefited no less than the visiting teams for a large number of the high schools represented are sending out graduating classes this spring that have in this way been brought into close contact with the normal. Powers won. It was good to see honors go to so small a school. That must indeed be an incentive for next year's contest, for the normal promises to make this an annual event. R. V. McNeal, who had charge of the tournament plans, deserves credit for the splendid way in which the affair was handled.
