

OSTEOPATHY

The Original Science of Healing by Adjustment

EDUCATIONAL REQUIREMENTS OF THE OSTEOPATHIC PHYSICIAN HIGH

The educational requirements of the osteopathic profession are high. In order to gain entrance to a school of osteopathy, applicants must furnish satisfactory evidence of good moral character.

There are no correspondence school courses in osteopathy. At present the minimum course of study requires four full years of five months each.

The following statements regarding osteopathic colleges were published in the Journal of the American Osteopathic Association for February, 1927:

"Entrance requirements are steadily improving and educational requirements within the schools are being improved."

"Classes are larger and include a constantly increasing proportion of college and university graduates."

"Laboratory equipment is more abundant and of a better grade."

"Clinics and hospitals are being used to a greater extent for osteopathic training."

There are six chartered osteopathic colleges recognized by the profession as Class A colleges; The American School of Osteopathy, Chicago, Ill.; The Philadelphia College of Osteopathy, Philadelphia, Pa.; The Kansas City College of Osteopathy, Kansas City, Mo.; and the Des Moines College of Osteopathy, Des Moines, Iowa.

The course of instruction is complete and the training thorough, as is evidenced by the following comparative curriculum:

Table with 2 columns: Subjects recommended by the Association of American Medical Colleges with a total of 4410 hours; and Osteopathy with a total of 4367 hours. Lists various subjects like Anatomy, Physiology, Chemistry, etc.
