The stereopticon pictures and lecture on "Soul of Tarasus" to be shown tonight at the Presbyterian church, picture the vivid scenes in the life of Christ when Paul was receiving his education at the feet of Gamaliel. This second lecture also carries the hearers into the thrilling story of Paul's remarkable conversion and the scenes in and around Damascus and the wilderness where he spent months in quiet retreat. The morning message will be brought by Rev. Walter L. Van Noy of Portland, Ore., who is constantly engaged in the promotion of the work of religious education in the Presbyterian churches over the state and in conducting joint schools for religious workers with all the denominations.

According to Olin Arnsperger, manager of the Talent irrigation district, the 1928 water supply for that district will exceed that of last year. There is at the present time 14,000 acre foot of water in the Talent reservoir, compared to the 12,000 of last year, and an additional 1,200 or 1,500 acre feet of water will probably be in the reservoir before the spring rains cease. In the Emigrant creek reservoir there is a capacity supply, 8,200 feet, the same as last year.
