

Events of the Week in Pictures

PRINCIPALS IN ROUMANIA'S DRAMATIC UPRISING

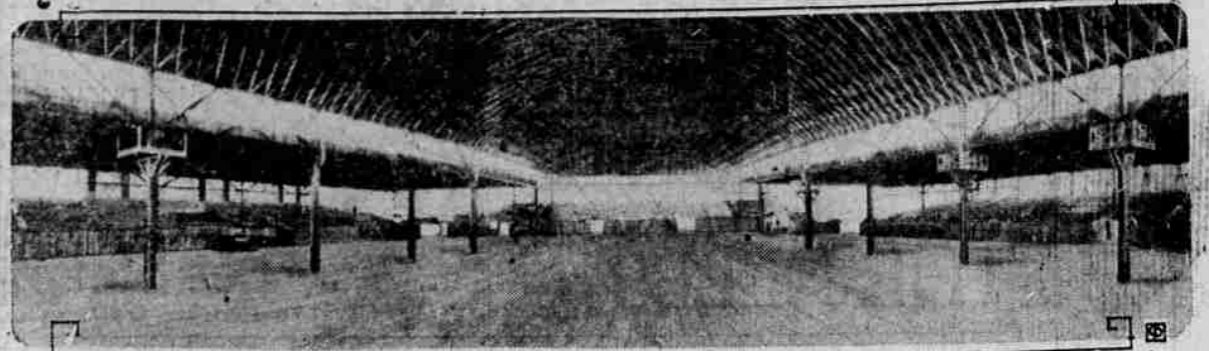

Roumania's march of the peasants upon Bucharest, the capital, to protest against the present government of Premier Vintila Bratianu, again brings a little group of persons to the attention of the whole world. They are Queen Marie, who still is popular with the peasants, her grandson, Michael, the present king; her son Carol, father of young Michael, whom many believe is planning to regain the throne; he renounced. Premier Bratianu, whose resignation is demanded by the peasants and Juliu Maniu, their leader.

Shoots Burglar

When Calvin Whatley, 15, of Dallas, Tex., heard a noise in a room occupied by his little brothers and sisters he got his father's shotgun and tiptoed in. A burglar was standing beside the bed with a knife in his hand. Calvin pulled the trigger three times, but there was no report. Then the man started for the boy, and Calvin, backing out the door tried the gun again. This time it discharged and the intruder ran, leaving a bloody trail behind. Photo shows Calvin with his father's shotgun.

FIRST PICTURE OF INTERIOR OF HUGE DEMOCRATIC CONVENTION HALL

In this first picture taken of the interior of coliseum built especially for the Democratic national convention the last of June in Houston, Tex., an idea is given of the structure's size, covering six acres, costing $175,000 and seating nearly 15,000 persons.

May Succeed Wood

Rice W. Means, above, former U. S. senator from Colorado, is considered as a likely successor to the late General Wood as governor general of the Philippines.

FRENCH PILOT TUNES UP PLANE FOR OCEAN ATTEMPT

Detroyat, French aviator, who is planning a Paris to New York non-stop flight alone, shown here landing at Le Bourget Field, Paris, after a test flight to Algiers, Morocco, and return. His plane, an Avimeta, is practically an all-metal copy of the Spirit of St. Louis. Inset is a closeup of the flyer.

CUSTOMS RECEIPT ISSUED FOR GERMAN PLANE

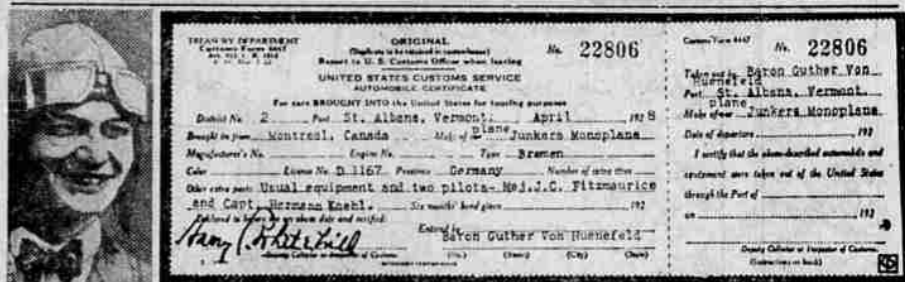

Photo of the customs clearance form issued by Harry C. Whitehall, collector of customs at St. Albans, Vt., to Baron von Huenefeld for the German transatlantic plane Bremen. Von Huenefeld is shown to the left. The form was forwarded to the baron in Canada, giving him all the courtesies of the U. S. customs to continue his flight to New York without the customary "red tape."

SHOT BY RUM FEUDISTS IN ESCAPING BURNING HOME

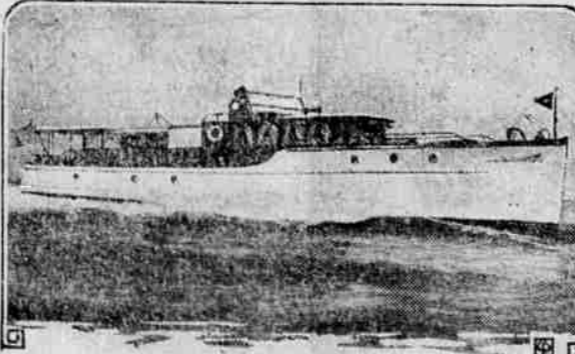

Mrs. Kate Browning, 60, of Shepherdsville, Ky., has been slain and five of her relatives wounded in fleeing from their flaming cabin, believed to have been set afire as a retaliatory measure by moonshiners who believed that the family had given information to prohibition agents that resulted in the seizure of a still. The Browning family, asleep in the cabin, awakened to find the house afire. Hacking their way out they were set on by a band of eight men who opened fire with shot guns. Photos above show some of the wounded members of the family. Left to right are Mrs. Amanda Jones, Mrs. Lou Browning, sister of the slain woman; Peachy Browning, and Angie Browning. Inset is Ben Browning, the first of the family to emerge from the burning cabin. Screaming that he was shot he hid in a haystack for 15 hours after the crime. It was feared that he, too, had been slain.

LATEST STLYE FOR AMPHIBIANS

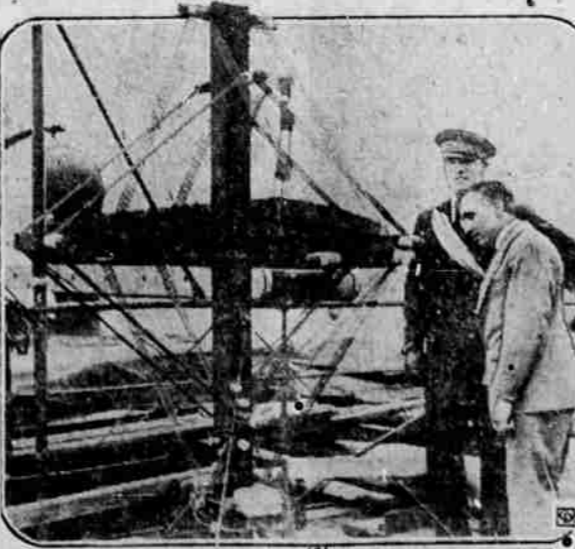

This amphibian plane, the Ireland Amphiplane, is one of the first of its kind to float on the water, fly in the air, and taxi on land. It's shown at Curtiss Field, L. I., during its test flights. The plane seats four passengers and a pilot, and attains a speed of 100 miles an hour in the air.

TAKES OWNER TO OFFICE IN RUSH

This $150,000 cruiser, declared by its designer, John H. Wells, to be the fastest craft of its type ever built, has been put into use by Walter P. Cryaler, motor magnate, in commuting between his estate at Great Neck, L. I., and his office in New York City. He has christened it "Frolic."

NOBILE'S LINK TO CIVILIZATION

View of one of the radio masts being taken to Spitzbergen by General Umberto Nobile's North Pole expedition for communication with the remainder of the world during the flight. Photo shows the electrical officer of the expedition and a radio expert examining the mast.

Overcomes Handicap

Ernest Newton, 19, a student at Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., isn't allowing a broken neck he received in an accident to interfere with his regular attendance at class. To overcome his handicap he carries a plaster cast covering his head, neck and shoulders.

YOUNG MURDERER AND CELLMATE

Owen Oberst, 17-year-old Kansas youth who confessed he shot and killed his parents and five sisters and brothers, then set fire to their home to burn the bodies of his victims to hide his crime, whiles away the time in the county jail at Eldorado, Kas., playing cards with his cellmate, Harvey Miller, 15. Oberst is at left, above, and Miller, right.

LABOR STAGES DEMONSTRATION IN MEXICAN CAPITAL

This photo, snapped as a great labor parade passed in review of Mexico's Labor Day, in Mexico City, shows the leaders saluting, President Calles and the diplomatic corps, watching the demonstration from the balconies of the national palace. The man in the light suit with a black hat in his hand is Jose Lopez Cortes mayor of Mexico City. At his right is the governor of the state of Zacatecas and at his left Eduardo Moneda, general secretary of the labor organization in Mexico City.

Fills New Post

Arthur Bliss Lane, formerly first secretary of the American embassy in Mexico City, has been appointed chief of the division of Mexican affairs, state department, to succeed Franklin Mott Gunther, relieved on account of illness.

STILL WEARS CIVIL WAR "KICKS"

Major John N. Gould, of Portland, Me., proudly exhibits a pair of shoes he purchased in 1860 for $2.25 and which he has worn since. He keeps 'em for Sunday best and G. A. R. reunions now. "They made good leather in those days," the major says.