the cost should be absolutely prohibitive. We don't mean there should be any waste of money or that any effort toward the strictest economy should be discouraged; but we do mean, that what aerial experts declare a modern and up-to-date station requires, should be furnished, and the airport constructed, just as soon as circumstances allow.

Medford now has every natural advantage as an important airport, but this advantage will be thrown away unless facilities are provided not only for airplane travel today, but for airplane travel of the future. Airplane development is proceeding at too rapid a clip for but at the end of twenty minutes in the case of the three main meak, he is to leave the table, whether he has eaten much, little or nothing. Well, Medford has the opportunity of getting a new railroad --only this is a railroad in the air instead of on the ground.
In a space of time that is going to take some people's breat and make and the first state of the beat of his sight toward the saw, rapid passenger transportation, as well as express and mail, is to be almost exclusively aerial. That this development is not the irridiscent dream of some over-enthusinstic aviator, the recent sensational rise of airplane stocks on the New York the recent sensational rise of airplane stocks on the New York the air train coast-to-coast service is only another indication.
Air transportation today is in something the situation of railroad transportation fifty years ago. Those communities in this direction, will benefit, and tose who don't, won't.
