Seventh Heaven Pleases Audiences Hunt's Craterian

A new star, probably the most brilliant that has yet appeared on the cinema firmament, was discovered with the showing of "7th Heaven," and that star is Janet Gaynor. So unexpected is her great and wistful loveliness, and with such sympathy and understanding does she play her role of Diane, the Paris street waif, that she completely captivates the hearts of her audience.

Sweetly demure, fearfully defiant or gloriously smiling through her tears, in each and every mood she is equally beautiful.

Charles Farrell, too, is a new star who comes into being with this production. He is Chico, the "very remarkable fellow," he says himself, who leads the little waif from the streets to the "7th Heaven."

Every one that has seen the picture is loud in their praise of the movie-tone that accompanies this feature and the two vitaphone acts are bringing hearty applause from every audience.

This program is being held off today to accommodate the high school commencement exercises, but will continue its regular run tomorrow.

A STANDARD OIL PRODUCT

A Purity Flavor Which You Should Know and Value

by Mary Blake

Habit is a powerful thing. We cling to old ways, often just because the new and better way is "different." I am reminded of this by the question which so many women, using Carnation Milk for the first time, ask me: "Why has it that different flavor?" Some of them even have the erroneous idea that something has been added to the milk to give it that distinctive flavor!

The rich flavor of Carnation Milk comes from just two things: it has twice the cream content of ordinary milk because it is evaporated to double richness—and it is sterilized, so that its purity is safeguarded from the time the milk goes into the can until it goes into the custard or cream soup you are making.

The purest of milk in a modern, convenient form

Carnation is not "prepared" milk. It is just the purest and sweetest high grade milk from selected herds. Nothing at all has been added to it. Nothing has been taken out—except about half the natural water content. This evaporation simply puts the milk into a more compact, convenient form. It is doubly rich—and tastes so. The heat of sterilization—which protects its purity—slightly caramelizes the natural milk sugar—and you taste this slight caramel flavor. It is a guaranty of goodness—the distinctive flavor of pure, uniformly high-grade whole milk—milk on which you can depend for better cooking results than even the best of bottled milk can give.

Part of the deliciousness it imparts is due to its rich creaminess. Another part is the result of its "homogenization," by which the cream content is broken up into extra-fine particles, so that they will not rise to the top as they do ordinarily, but will be distributed all through the milk, making the last drop as richly creamy as the first.

These extra-fine cream globules give a notably smooth texture to all dishes in which Carnation Milk is used. That is why you hear so much about the velvety soups and sauces, the smooth ice creams, the creamy candies, the fine-textured cakes which Carnation Milk makes.

Carnation Milk is most convenient; you buy it in quantity and keep it without refrigeration. It is economical, too, saving on butter and cream and preventing waste by its dependable quality.

Won't you send for the Carnation Cook Book? It is free. Address Carnation Milk Products Co., 476-A Glisan St., Portland.

Carnation Chocolate Ice Cream

1 cup sugar, few grains salt, 4 cups Carnation Milk, 2 sqs. bitter chocolate, 3 eggs, 1 tsp. vanilla. Heat milk and sugar in double boiler; melt chocolate, add to milk; heat until well blended. Pour into well beaten eggs; cook in double boiler 2 minutes; add salt and flavoring. Chill and freeze, using 1 part salt to 5 parts ice

Milk you can depend upon

Wonderful, isn't it, to have available anywhere, any time, a milk so pure, so richly creamy, so uniform in quality, so dependable as Carnation Milk. It's simply the best of milk evaporated to double richness and sterilized for safekeeping.
