The "Voice of Old Gold" which sends music from high in the clouds

What would you think if sometime in the course of your day's work you should suddenly become conscious of a stentorian voice speaking in your ear—a voice apparently coming from nowhere?

And what would you think, if you went to your window and saw scores of people on the street stopped in their tracks and looking up in excited interest?

No, it isn't St. Gabriel we are speaking. The voice will probably say something like this: "Hello (name of your city here)! This is the 'Voice of Old Gold' speaking to you from 3,000 feet in the air."

For that is exactly what has happened in scores of other cities from New England down the Atlantic seaboard and through the South where the "Voice of Old Gold" has delivered its cheery message.

These words may some day hear will be spoken in a fast-flying Fokker plane far over your head—spoken into a microphone in the cockpit of the plane, magnified over a million times and so broadcast to us common mortals on the ground.

The "announcer" in this new type of broadcasting may send you a late flash of national news received in the plane by radio. He could, if he desired, broadcast to you a song like being sung at that moment on a Broadway stage. . . . Or he may say only a few words of cheerful greeting that will bring a smile to the many thousands of faces below. He will probably tell you, among other things, that he is smoking an Old Gold Cigarette and that "there's not a cough in a carload." For this tour of the "Voice of Old Gold" plane is sponsored by the great tobacco house, P. Lorillard Company.

The inventors of this voice of the skies, seeing in their invention great possibilities of national service, approached various agencies to finance an extended testing tour. P. Lorillard Company volunteered. So the plane was christened the "Voice of Old Gold" after the famous Lorillard cigarette.

The plane itself that is making this unique tour is interesting—a three motored Fokker, sister ship to the plane in which Commander Byrd and Floyd Bennett made their history-making dash to the Pole.

So unusual is this magic voice and so great may be its possibilities that it has already attracted the attention of the principal governments of the world.

Assistant Secretary William P. McCracken, Chief of the Bureau of Aeronautics, U. S. Department of Commerce, tested the equipment in a recent flight over Washington, D. C., and stated that the device held great possibilities.

The "Voice of Old Gold" plane is now continuing its tour of the South and may later be heard in various other sections.

SAMS VALLEY, June 9.—(Special)—Charles White and daughter, Miss Dorothy of Lake Creek, were week-end visitors here, with Mr. White's mother, Mrs. E. A. White, who returned home with them to remain until improved in health.

Much complaint has been made over the condition of the road that is under construction near the stores and public business places, but it's a long lane that has no turning, and maybe when this lane turns into a fine macadam emiled road, we will appreciate it all the more for the inconvenience we've suffered. If the Sams valley road is completed, according to plans outlined, it will be one of the best thoroughfares in the county.

Orchardists have commenced thinning fruit with small crews, as much less thinning is necessary than during previous years. In the Siskiyou orchards enough fruit fell to make thinning unnecessary this year.

STATE GRANGE TO WORK FOR CHANGE IN STATE GOVT.

RAINIER, Ore., June 9.—(Special)—A cabinet form of government for the state was endorsed by the Oregon State Grange and the Grange will get behind a movement to have an initiative bill put on the ballot for the fall election. Petitions were distributed among the delegates to the convention, which closed here last night, and these will be circulated.

The proposed measure, which Hector McPherson, of Linn county, has been advocating, would do away with all present state boards and put the entire state management under the governor and to cabinet officers. A similar plan is in effect in the state of Washington.

The State Grange reached a compromise over the Granger Businessmen's club dispute. This developed from a resolution adopted at the Corvallis convention last year, permitting the formation of a club within the Grange, with separate officers, designed to raise money with which to promote Grange measures before the people and legislatures.

Under the compromise, State Master G. A. Palmiste will appoint a committee to have charge of the matter, the separate officers being done away with. The money cannot be spent without consent of two-thirds of the delegates at future Grange sessions.

Among resolutions adopted was one endorsing the so-called Coon county plan of property assessment. This differs from the ordinary assessment in that there is a complete record of all improvements as well as the land.

Coon Bay won the next annual convention, the vote being 210 to 68 for Grants Pass. The salary of State Master Palmiste was increased from $200 to $2000 a year after a raise of $200 was refused.

Shuler of New York.

GRAIN HEARING IN SEATTLE IS NEARING THE END

SEATTLE, June 9.—(Special)—Bringing the J. C. C. hearing on Columbia basin grain rates to a close, Longview presented its bid today for eastern Washington grain harvested south of the Snake river.

Gas Anderson was called to the stand when the session opened today and told of the hopes of Longview for developing into a grain export port. Anderson is opposed to the present 10 per cent differential on grain shipped from south of the Snake river to Portland.

He said that under present conditions railroads serving Longview ship full trains of empty boxcars into Longview to be loaded with lumber. He testified that these cars carry grain to Portland under the differential and are sent to Longview empty after being unloaded at Portland. He added that Longview has a 400,000 bushel grain elevator under construction.

The commission will take up the Montana export rate case next. Minneapolis millers are attacking the western export rates from Montana while eastern Washington growers are demanding that the railroads be ordered to give export rates from their district.

Mrs. Betty Brown was a Medford visitor Tuesday. Miss Mildred Burger was a visitor at the Boswell home Tuesday night.

Hartman, Estel Bohner, Mervyn, Johnny Bohner, Carl Coleman, Carl Boswell, Phillip and Everett Hezmalhalch, Mr. and Mrs. Hezmalhalch. The evening was spent in playing Pif and other similar table games and in music. Dainty refreshments of cake, punch and candy were served.

Word was received of the death of Mrs. Ellen Burger last Friday at the home of her brother, John Julech, in Eagle Valley, eastern Oregon. Mrs. Burger has been in poor health for some time and just recently went to Eagle Valley in hopes of being benefited by the climate. She leaves her husband, Albert Burger, three sons, Jack and Benton of this city, Charles Burger of Canada, and Mrs. Nettie Herring of Oklahoma, and three grandchildren. Mr. and Mrs. Burger came to Central Point about a year and a half ago, and during their short residence here have made many friends who sympathize with the family in their bereavement. Mrs. Burger was a devout Christian and leaves behind her the consolation that all is well with her.
