GOVERNOR CARKIN IS IN HIDING HERE

Evidently tired out with spending the week at Salem and Portland looking after the duties of the governor's office, and with the prominence and attentions thrust upon him as acting governor, it was learned this noon that John H. Carkin had arrived home during the forenoon, altho his stenographer Miss Betty Boies did not learn of this until early this afternoon when she was told that he had been seen driving on the highway near the city.

Mrs. Carkin had not visited his office at all by early this afternoon, and probably on reaching the city at once went to his home, 512 South Dakota street, and is taking the afternoon off. He is expected to remain in the city at least until over next Tuesday, as there is a city council meeting Tuesday night, which requires his presence as city attorney of Medford. Mr. Carkin will continue to act as governor until the return of Governor Patterson to the state on June 26.

NO FIRECRACKERS FOR LOCAL KIDS

As in other years past, Fourth of July will not be observed by the youth of Medford by the firing of firecrackers, skyrockets, roman candles or other fireworks, according to official announcement made today by Chief of Police McCredie and Fire Chief Roy Elliott. Any youngster caught setting off fireworks will be promptly hauled to the police station, making it much more inviting for boys to go out in the country.

Roadside service stations have been selling firecrackers for several weeks already and shortly before Fourth of July, a number of fireworks stands will probably spring up along the highway north and south of the city. When in the country, it will be unlawful to set off firecrackers from roads or in the woods, where fire is apt to result.
