FLETCHER FISH

PROVES TO BE A VERY RARE BIRD

Fletcher Fish, who has never been a very easy mark for any buncy man or jackknife trader, especially in recent years, and Mrs. Fish arrived home the last of last week from a ten days auto trip covering all parts of the state except southern Oregon, with a much better appreciation and realization of the importance of Oregon. In fact, they had their eyes opened. Neither realized how ignorant they were of Oregon's general resources and wonderful scenery of various kinds, until taking this leisurely trip.

They visited western Oregon, Portland, central and eastern Oregon, went to Walla Walla, Wash., for a meal and for something else Fletcher sought, only to learn that pop and soda water are the favorite beverages in that section of Washington state and adjoining Oregon; and took in the ocean drive and resorts from Port Orford down to Crescent City.

In inquiry today about the trip of himself and wife his talk was remarkable in that although being a loyal Medfordian and Phoenixer, and likewise booster, while he praised the resources, scenic beauty, activity, roads and other features of the various Oregon sections and cities and towns visited, Mr. Fish did not any time mention any of them in comparison with Medford or the Rogue River valley, or wind up his interview by saying he found nothing like Medford, or "this is a great country." Nevertheless, Fletcher seemed in good health and spirits. He simply boasted the whole state. ⁸⁸
