

WOMAN RETURNS AFTER 9 MONTHS IN LOCAL WILDS

On top of the world for nine months, surrounded by snow-covered mountains, with bear steak and canned duck their chief food, a man and a woman had the time of their lives and never once got lonesome. This is the story told by J. W. Beal and his wife "Mickey," who came out to civilization yesterday for the first time since they went to Diamond Lake as caretakers in September.

Five years ago the young couple came to southern Oregon from New York. They lived in the Prospect district until last fall. Mrs. Beal had never shot a gun, nor roughed it in the hills, but she was game when her husband told her he wanted her to go to the lake for the winter, which meant giving up dances, shows and all the things they both enjoyed.

When there was 26 inches of ice on the lake and seven feet of snow on the ground they sat in their cozy little cabin and tuned in on Chicago or Portland with their small radiola, a 20 dry-cell set. Not once during all those months did the radio fail them. A mandolin, banjo and mouth-harp were other means of entertainment, and then there was the other member of the family, "Jerry," a homely young Alreadale.

"It's been so long since I wore a dress that I felt out of place the other day when I 'dressed up' to meet some of the tourists," Mrs. Beal remarked. Slim and boyish, dressed in hiking trousers with a light green shirt and dark tie she looked like the out-door woman one reads about as she sat in the car yesterday telling of their adventure.

Every day the two of them started out on snow-shoes to visit the traps with Jerry at their heels. Bear, coyote, mink, lynx and a bald eagle are among the animals they caught. Several bags of beautiful furs were brought here to be checked up for the bounty. The eagle trapped during the winter had a wing spread of seven and a half feet. It was taken by a movie concern and has been shown in news reels.

Seven or eight hundred tourists come in to the lake every Sunday now, according to the Beals. About half of that number are from California. New motels have been put in all of the boats and 14 new cabins are being constructed at the resort.

At present Mr. Beal is employed at the fish hatchery which has over a million small fish ready to be released in the lake. "Come up kid, you'll get the tariff of your life," was the farewell to the reporter.

GIRL AIR HERO HAS NO USE FOR LATEST STYLES

NEW YORK, June 20.—(AP)—Fashions—either of air or earth—have no appeal to Amelia Earhart. Clothes she regards as a matter of fact of necessity, like food.

Furthermore, flying is a perfectly natural thing in her opinion and requires no special togs—a dress is as good air equipment as trousers.

So when the Boston social worker prepared to hop across the Atlantic she had to borrow her flying clothes.

Brown trousers, a silk shirt, a turtle-necked sweater and an old leather flying coat, plus two handkerchiefs and a toothbrush. These were Amelia Earhart's accoutrements when she hopped over to Wales. Even the trousers went only on the insistence of friends.

"I didn't get all cluttered up for an automobile," she protested. "Why should I dress any differently for this?"

When, in the long days of waiting at Trepansey, she wired a friend who knew of her scanty wardrobe that she was seeing much of the Catholic sisters and received the suggestion that she retire and be laundered by the nuns, she sent the characteristic reply:

"Thank for the fatherly advice. No need laundering. Stockings and underwear worn out and have lost only shirt to slim playing rummy."

A bag, she vetoed as "useless equipment," refusing to take anything "the boys" could not have.

Money was eliminated on the same grounds.

"If I didn't get there," she announced, "I won't need it. And if I do it will be all right."

Money, those who know her say, has never been a part of her scheme of things for herself. It is of use only for what it will buy in the work in which her interest lies.

That interest, now centered in aviation and the Benison settlement house of Boston, has led her through a vari-colored field. A pre-medical scientific course at Columbia university, Canadian Red Cross nursing during the war and work in commercial photography have been a few patterns in that field.

She even ran a stone quarry for several months when she needed money to buy a new plane.

Amelia Earhart is a tall, athletic girl weighing only 118 pounds in spite of her five feet nine inches. She has short, blonde curls, and level, direct grey eyes. She dresses in any clothes that come to hand.

She would rather read than eat, rather sit on the floor than on a chair, rather fence than play bridge, rather drive her car than do any of these.

The battered roadster known as the "Yellow Peril" is her constant companion. When annoyances irritate her and troubles afflict, Amelia takes the car and hies herself to the country. She shoots through traffic with a brisk, breezy assurance.

Poise, those who know her say, is the dominating quality of her person. Through the days of waiting at Trepansey she is said never to have betrayed impatience or irritation.

When asked if she did not wish to give up the flight she replied: "Never! I thought this all out in the first five minutes and I know I want to go. I'm going because I love life and all it has to offer. I want every opportunity and adventure it can give and I would never wench on one of them."

DANCE SEASON AT LITHIA PARK OPENS JUNE 21

Lithia park's dance pavilion will be officially opened for the summer months Thursday night, June 21, with a free band concert at 8 o'clock followed by a carnival dance.

This will be the first dance held by the Lithians in the Ashland park for over two years. The opening night promises to be a big one, as special music will be furnished by Domino Provoost and his popular southern Oregon symphony orchestra, who have worked out several clever features. This orchestra played during the winter season at Jackson Hot Springs and drew record crowds.

Members of the Lithian octette will be on hand Thursday with several new song numbers. Dances are to be given at the pavilion every week, according to present plans.

PREVENT SUNBURN BY USING ANTI-PRÉOXOL

Although residents of the Pacific northwest are spending more time outdoors than ever before, there is less suffering from sunburn. This is the observation of E. R. Card, who is now here supervising the distribution of Anti-Préoxol nationally known remedy for burns and sunburn.

This is due to the fact people are preventing sunburn by using special preparations before exposing themselves to the sun, says Mr. Card. Also that certain oils have been discovered which reduce the severity of sunburn almost instantaneously.

Many persons, particularly those employed inside, refrain from spending any length of time in the sunshine for fear of sunburn. By first applying Anti-Préoxol, says Mr. Card, they can prevent any discomfort from sunburn. Yet they can acquire a natural coat of tan and receive full benefit of the sun's rays.

Light Rain Predicted.—Unsettled tonight and Thursday, probably light rains near the coast and local thunderstorms in the mountains. Normal temperature, rising humidity. Moderate, variable winds, mostly southwesterly.

AMELIA GIVES ALL CREDIT TO PILOT

WASHINGTON, June 20.—(AP)—The successful flight of the airplane Friendship was entirely due to Wilmer Stultz's great skill, Miss Amelia Earhart called Secretary of State Kellogg today. The cable, in reply to congratulations on the flight of the Friendship, read:

"The crew of the Friendship joins me in hearty appreciation of your message. It is my earnest wish that the people of the United States understand that the success was entirely due to the great skill of Wilmer Stultz."

STRANG'S DRUG STORE

ONE HOUR FROM SUVA

The goal one hour away... about an hour's supply of gasoline. Storm blown course changes and forced climbs in attempts to avoid thunderstorms depleted the narrow margin of safety in the fuel supply of the Southern Cross on its magnificent trans-pacific flight. This was the one point in the flight when the great land plane sent no word messages. Just the steady buzz of a tied down radio key told the world they were still in the air. This audible silence was broken by, "We're going to make it," followed by, "we didn't send because we didn't want to worry anybody." Behind this dramatic scene is a performance story for the fuel they used. We are glad Union Aviation Gasoline met this crisis well... with 23 gallons to spare.

'Alex the Great' Is at Rialto Tomorrow

Something new under the sun—a movie that draws a musical accompaniment, one that makes an orchestra useless. It is not a talking movie—it is a laugh movie. The laughs begin soon after the title is flashed and they stop some time after the audience leaves the lobby.

"Alex, The Great" is the title. It begins a run at the Rialto theater tomorrow. The film story was adapted from H. C. Witwer's short story.

Alex is a Vermont farmer boy who arrives in New York convinced that the big city needs talent like his. The city fellows, including his cousin-in-law, who is a baseball manager, try to convince him he is a boob, but—What happens after that makes the picture funny. Seeing is believing.

There is an unusually strong cast consisting of some well known stage and screen favorites. Alex is portrayed by Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, who was popular on the vaudeville stage for several years and has an enviable reputation as an actor on both the legitimate stage and screen.
