"These stop signs mean what they say," said City Traffic Officer G. J. Present this forenoon, "and the enforcement of the stop sign law will be redoubled in a short time if the motorists do not pay more heed to the signs, which were placed there only for their benefit. Quite a number of complaints have come to me of drivers totally ignoring the signs and often causing near collisions. This sort of thing must stop."

On their way to Crater Lake for the opening day, William B. Hansen of Hood River and Frank Eamson of Portland stopped here last evening after spending Thursday at Oregon Caves. They had hoped to see the Indian runners on the last stretch of their run, but missed them. Eleven blacktailed deer were seen by the two men who told about one little fawn trying to vault a steep bank when the car came along. Just as it neared the top it fell backward and just missed hitting the car, they said.
