Two 14 1/2 weighing seven pounds each, were born June 21 to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Tyo of San Mateo, Calif., according to a wire received yesterday by relatives. Mr. Tyo will be remembered as the founder of the present Modern Plumbing and Sheet Metal company in Medford.

California tourists who stopped here for a few hours today included Paul Sturdivant and Don Finch of Glendale. They were on their way to Portland and Seattle for a two months' vacation.

Among the local guests in Medford from the state of Washington are Mr. and Mrs. H. Franklin of Tacoma, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Briggs of Snohomish, W. J. Ploer of Bellingham, Mrs. S. S. Nesbit of Ellensburg and R. M. Fletcher and L. Hewitt of Seattle.

The county agent's office phone rang this forenoon and Mrs. Gladys York, the office stenographer, on picking up the receiver, was surprised to hear the following: "This is Young talking from Ashland—Floyd Young, your, the front man. Is Wilcox there? No? Well, how is the pear crop getting along? That's good, isn't it? I am en route to Vancouver, B. C., and hopped off the Shasta train to call up your office."

It seems that Mr. Young, who was on his way to Vancouver to attend the convention of the Northwest Association of Horticulturists, Pathologists and Entomologists, was so anxious to learn how the valley pear crop was progressing that, during the train stop at Ashland he hopped off and called up the county agent's office here on the phone. He had heard nothing about the progress of the fine crop of pears after leaving here the first of the month.

When the train reached the Medford station simultaneous with its coming to a stop Mr. Young jumped off from one of the coaches to the depot platform and began to question the waiting delegation consisting of a Mail Tribune reporter and Dwight Randall of the local U. S. weather station, about the condition of the fruit-crop.

He was very much pleased to know that there had been no wind or hail damage since his departure from the city. Mr. Young will be back through here in about ten days on his way to his headquarters at Los Angeles, but will not stop unless his services are needed. He seems to have the hail or wind bug apprehension in his head, and said that if anything of that kind should damage the crop he would be glad to come here and help the fruit growers out in any way possible.

"Oh, by the way," Mr. Young said, as the train started to pull out, "if you see Van Hovenberg or Dave Wood, tell them the secretary of agriculture is coming out this way soon, and to do their stuff. He is coming to Portland but I don't know whether or not he is coming to Medford, but he may come if invited. Tell them to do their stuff anyhow. They will understand."

After three months of searching for a girl on whom to bestow the title and the rewards that go with it—fame and a contract with Florenz Ziegfeld, for example—Clive made his announcement yesterday.

And he revealed that at the last moment it was fate, and not himself, who made the ultimate choice.

"In my quest for the Golden Girl, whom I was commissioned to find in California by Florenz Ziegfeld," he explained, "I've seen 25,000 blonde girls since I arrived here three months ago. They besieged me. I even had to use the back door of my apartment to escape the blondes who were waiting for me in front."

And, finally, out of all these, the choice narrowed down to two. One was Lolla Hyams, screen actress; the other, Marjorie Finley, who, I understood, was a New York girl out here seeking a place in the films.

"For days I wondered which of the two to choose. They were fifty-fifty in all who had some of the attributes that go toward making the ideal blonde. And finally, fate stepped in and made the choice for me. Miss Hyams signed a contract to stay here in Hollywood for motion picture work."

And, since one of the conditions of being chosen the Golden Girl includes being featured in the Ziegfeld's Folies, Miss Hyams was automatically eliminated and left Miss Finley as the choice.

Her measurements as given out by Henry Clive are as follows: Height, five feet 7 1/2 inches; bust, 35 1/2 inches; waist, 28 inches; hips, 37 1/2 inches; calf, 14 inches; ankle, 9 inches.
