BIG SALES GAINS MADE BY DURANT

Topping by a wide margin all previous marks in its history and registering sales gains of nearly 100 per cent over the corresponding period of last year, Durant scored another record-smashing month in the state of California during May, according to figures just released by Motor Registration News. This increase is greater than that recorded by any of the other leading ten makes of motor cars in this state, points out Norman De Vaux, head of the Pacific Coast Durant factory. It beats the high April Durant figure by more than 20 per cent.

"A tabulation of the complications by counties shows that Durant was first, or tied for first in 43 California cities and towns and was second, or tied for second, in 52 cities and towns," says De Vaux. "San Francisco sales gained 152 per cent over May 1927. Oakland registered a gain of 400 per cent over the same month of last year. Many other representative cities being up similar impressive sales increases."

"No is California the only state where Durant is shown with phenomenal increases. Oregon sales in May brought Durant to third position on the sales ladder in that section. Washington registration statistics show a gain of 92 per cent. Utah sales figures show Durant more firmly entrenched in second place, and making a strong bid for the leadership in that state."

"The overwhelming demand for Durant cars has resulted in a gain in registrations in all states in the union, including the District of Columbia, for the first three months of the year. When national registration figures are available for April and May, this Durant gain will undoubtedly be much greater."

"These unprecedented records are being made, too, in the face of the keenest competition, both in manufacturing and selling, that the industry has ever known. Yet each month shows an increasing enthusiasm from dealers and public alike. More cars are being shipped from Durant plants than ever before. As fast as official new car registrations are released, new all-time sales records are established. There are now more unfilled orders on hand than at any previous time in Durant history."

OREGON STATE AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, Corvallis. — Boys' and Girls' club members finished their first week of summer school on the campus with the largest enrollment in history, the total reaching 612 as compared with 515 a year ago. In addition to morning class work and afternoon recreation, daily assemblies are giving the visitors opportunity to hear some of the leading men and women of the state. A daily mimeographed paper is being issued this year for the exclusive use of the "clubbers." Visitors remark about the orderly manner in which the big session is conducted.

Though bacillary diarrhea infection is not likely to be contracted by mature fowls from others infected, such possibility exists, warns the experiment station. "Checks from disease free flocks are not certain to be entirely disease free themselves, but are more likely to be and hence are best kept separate from stock from an infected source."

In irrigating lawns and gardens, more satisfactory results are obtained by watering the soil instead of the air, says the soils department. "Checks from disease free flocks are not certain to be entirely disease free themselves, but are more likely to be and hence are best kept separate from stock from an infected source."

A growing interest in supplemental irrigation all over the state is noted this year by men of the experiment station. More strawberries were given irrigation this year than ever before with profitable results in the main. Many small pumping systems have been installed.

The date of the sixth annual convention of Oregon poultrymen has been set for July 18 and 19 at the state college when the general "keynote" of the session will be economic production. While the annual meeting of the State Poultrymen's association will be held at this time, the convention is of an educational nature and is open to all regardless of whether they are members of the association. A special tent for the occasion will be erected near the new poultry building. Exhibits demonstrating economic management, feeding, marketing and disease control will be prepared.

BUILDING NEWS

DAIRY BUILDINGS AND BARN

HOW TO OWN A HOME

Nearly everyone has a natural, innate desire to own a home of his own; it is a desire handed down from generations ago, from the time when the man who owned his own home was a lord and his home was a castle, and the man who was paying rent was a tenant who paid a large percentage of his earnings to a neighboring lord. Conditions have not changed so much only in one respect, that today it is an easy matter for anyone to own their own home. Modern methods of financing the building of a home have made it possible for anyone to do so.

We are in a position to guarantee to all that we can make the necessary arrangements for the financing of your new home regardless of your present financial status, and invite you to confer with us in reference to our different plans for financing for you a new home or other buildings as you may require.

There is available at our office for your use plans and advice on the proper kind of a dairy building as prepared and approved by W. J. Gilmore, Agricultural Engineering Dept., Oregon Agricultural College, and L. J. Smith of the Washington State College.

Avail yourself of this opportunity and call at our office for an inspection of these plans for dairy buildings.

Death Coincidence

Exactly one year later, to the minute, after Horace B. Chase, II, of Palm Beach, Fla., and New York, executed his will, he met death in an airplane crash at West Palm Beach, Fla. Chase executed his last will and testament at 5:45 p. m., May 19, 1927. His watch, which stopped when a plane in which he was riding nosedived, carrying both him and his pilot, John H. DeMott, to their death, ceased ticking at 5:45 p. m., May 19, 1928. The reading of his will has revealed the coincidence.
