

NATIONAL GUARD HAD A MUTINY; OFFICER IS FIRED

PORTLAND, Ore., June 28.—(AP)—Mutiny of a company of National Guardsmen at Camp Clatsop during the encampment which ended yesterday, and forced resignation of the captain, was revealed today, the Portland Telegram says.

The unit involved, the Telegram says, was Company A, 116th engineers, and the officer, Captain Abraham Forester, Portland.

The trouble, which led to the appointment of a board of review by General George A. White, was said to have started over parking of Captain Forester's automobile. Forester was said to have had an altercation with a guard after driving his car into camp at night instead of leaving it in a place designated for officers' cars. The Telegram's report continues: "During the altercation, it was reported, an officer who outranked Captain Forester appeared suddenly on the scene, his identity unknown to Forester, who is said to have upbraided him for meddling in the affair.

"Forester discovered only too late that he was addressing a senior officer, who is said to have been a colonel, in his night shirt. The officer of the day later ordered Captain Forester to his quarters under arrest and General White was informed.

"General White then named a board of review. "Meanwhile, word of the disciplinary action reached the ears of Company A, 116th engineers, commanded by Captain Forester. When time for duty came they refused to participate in maneuvers.

"The entire company was placed under arrest at General White's orders, but later released when matters were patched up. Meanwhile, the board of review returned its findings to General White, who is said to have requested Forester's resignation for the good of the service.

"The resignation is now in the hands of General White at Salem."

Emil Jannings in Mighty Drama at Hunt's Craterian Beginning Tonight

EMIL JANNINGS AND EVELYN BRENT IN A SCENE FROM "THE LAST COMMAND"

What is believed to be one of the most powerful dramas ever enacted on the American screen appears at Hunt's Craterian theater today, starring the international and incomparable actor, Emil Jannings, in "The Last Command." It is superb. A great warrior, mighty in power, beloved by his men; a traitor and a girl befriended by him; revolution, poverty; that in brief is the bare outline of Emil Jannings' second American made production, which captured the audience this afternoon.

"The Last Command" is a worthy successor to Jannings' two previous productions in which he appeared before the American screen, going public in "Variety" and "The Way of All Flesh." Jannings does an unbelievably splendid characterization of a Russian general and is then torn from his riches and might by the revolutionists. A great actor is this Jannings, and a great picture has been given him in "The Last Command." He makes the most of the role and carries out the theme of the dramatic story as no other living actor could do.

Being presented on the same bill are two acts of Vitaphone vaudeville that are a show in themselves. Fred Ardath, the well known vaudeville comedian is seen and heard with his company in the comedy sketch, "Men Among Men." The other act is presented by the well known pair, Van and Schenck, the pennant winning battery of songland. They offer a series of their most popular song numbers in a way that gets over 100 per cent.

SALEM MAN GAVE INFORMATION TO HURT STATE FLAX

SALEM, Ore., June 28.—(AP)—Mystery surrounding the recent discharge of Robert Crawford from city employment here was explained today when it became known that Crawford had secretly conspired to injure the state flax industry at the penitentiary. Crawford was formerly employed as superintendent of the industry at the prison, but was three times discharged for cause, it was said at the prison today. He was employed and discharged successively under the administrations of Governor Withycombe, Oblett and Pierce. He again sought employment under the Patterson administration when Henry W. Meyers was appointed prison superintendent, but Meyers refused to employ him.

About a year ago a shipment of upholstery tow from the state plant to British Columbia was suddenly stopped after reaching Canada. This puzzled the Oregon officials until informed later by the Canadian customs that the latter had been informed by Crawford that the Oregon tow was processed by prison labor. For the first time the prison officials, they were informed of a Canadian statute prohibiting the importation of prison-processed materials.

Later railroad officials informed state officials that they had been approached by Crawford, who asked about Oregon flax shipments declaring the flax industry should not be in the prison and that he was going to take measures to get it out. Crawford was employed by the city to re-number houses in the residence district. Because of his activities against the flax industry prison officials went to Mayor Livesley and protested his employment by the city. Crawford denied these activities when called to account by the mayor. A little later an English firm that buys Oregon flax products wrote prison officials here enclosing a letter Crawford had written the firm, containing information similar to that sent the Canadian firm. The date on this letter showed it had been written after he had been called on the carpet by Mayor Livesley.

The situation became serious since England, too, had a statute against importation of prison-processed goods, of which the Oregon officials say they were unaware. While the state has not escaped damage, it is believed no permanent harm has been done. Because the state's flax market is mainly outside the United States and because of the existence of about $100,000 worth of contracts between the state and Willamette valley farmers covering this season's flax crop, Crawford's machinations were considered serious enough to warrant his discharge from the city service. The city engineer discharged Crawford when he was furnished a copy of the letter Crawford wrote the English firm.

That Crawford's motive was revenge, and not a passion for law observance, is indicated, prison officials say, by the fact that during his employment at the prison he assisted in the shipment of Oregon flax into British territory, presumably aware of the existence of the law. How to Safeguard Your Children on July Fourth

"The parents of three small children killed by fireworks last year recently appeared before the Rochester, N. Y., common council and urged the adoption of an ordinance to prohibit the sale and discharge of fireworks within the city, with the exception of the display of set pieces at community celebrations." The ordinance requested by these bereaved parents was passed by the council—too late, so far as they were concerned—but their action may be the means of saving other children.

"The type of firework which is set off by grinding under the heel, or by pounding, and which is known by various fanciful names, such as 'nigger chaser,' 'spit devil,' 'devil-on-the-walk,' etc., contains phosphorus, a deadly poison. It is not a rare thing for a young child, mistaking this material for candy, to put some of it in his mouth, usually with a fatal result. Or children may become poisoned by handling the material and subsequently putting their fingers in their mouth. If an accident of this kind happens, give the victim liquid petroleum or mineral oil and call a doctor immediately. "Seven birds are always dangerous. On the Fourth don't dress children in fluff, light material which will easily catch fire. Even sparklers, which ordinarily are harmless, have been reported important causes of Fourth of July accidents and means by which they can safeguard their youngsters. "Tetanus or lockjaw is perhaps the danger most to be feared as a result of Fourth of July accidents call your doctor at once and get him give tetanus antitoxin. If you cannot find your doctor, call the health department. The lockjaw germ will get him give tetanus antitoxin. If you cannot find your doctor, call the health department. The lockjaw germ will get him give tetanus antitoxin.
