COUNTY COURT HOLDS A ROUTINE SESSION

The county court held a short session today, approved bills and transacted business on account of the regular session coming tomorrow—a legal holiday. All county offices will be closed tomorrow.

The clerk's office continued strenuous efforts in the checking of signatures on the fish protection petitions, and expects to have the work completed late this afternoon. A last-hour rush of petitions swamped the clerical force.

This county signed the petitions more freely than other counties in the state, according to reports, and more interest was aroused here than in other sections. Circulators of the petitions have been busy for the last two weeks.
