JACK MUNROE, WAR HERO AND FIGHTER, DIES IN CANADA

MONTREAL, Que., July 6.—(AP) Jack Munroe, prospector, miner and soldier, but best known as the man who, unknown at that time, stood up to Jim Jeffries for four rounds when the latter was champion of the world, is dead.

His body was found in his cabin near Rouyn, Ont., by two men who were attracted to the place by the barking of his dog. He evidently had been dead for several days.

Munroe, one of the little band of survivors of the original "Princess Pat" regiment, had led a colorful life. He was a native of Canada. When the South African war broke out he enlisted and served throughout the conflict before the decorated several times for bravery.

Coming home from the wars, he took up mining and when the great silver rush started in 1906 he was mayor of the city of Cobalt.

In 1903 Jeffries was touring the country, challenging any man to stay in the ring with him four rounds. Munroe, described in old press notices as a natural fighter, accepted and stayed the limit. He was credited with a knockdown of the "big fellow" during the course of the joint Jeffries knocked him out in two rounds in a later engagement.

Encouraged with his success against Jeffries, Munroe came to the United States and won a newspaper decision against Tom Sharkey in Philadelphia in 1904.

When the World war broke out Munroe immediately joined the Princess Pats. As he was so broad of shoulder it was difficult to find a uniform to fit him in the early days.

A lover of dogs, Munroe took a puppy with him into the service. Told that he could not take the dog to France with him, he smuggled it aboard the boat. Taken from him when he landed in France, Munroe stole it out of quarantine and got it into the trenches. It was with him all through the war and the dog whose bowling led to the finding of his body is believed to be the same one. He had been a prospector since the war and lived alone in his isolated little cabin.

'Square Crooks' Film At Rialto Tomorrow

Robert Armstrong, Johnny Mack Brown and Dorothy Dwan are to be seen in a thrilling crook drama, "Square Crooks," which opens at the Rialto theater tomorrow for a one-day run. The members of the trio have established themselves as screen favorites wherever motion pictures are shown.

Armstrong won fame as the "pug" in the stage production of "Is Zat So?" Brown will be remembered as one of the All-American football stars of 1926, while Miss Dwan played opposite Tom Mix in a series of thrilling westerns.

Many Enjoy Gilbert Film at Craterian

Most pictures have to do with love, of course. But it has remained to John Gilbert, more or less noted as a lover, to inject a new idea into this thing that screen drama is made of. The idea—and it is an intensely dramatic and thunderously powerful one—is to be seen in "The Cossacks," now playing at Hunt's Craterian theater.

"The Cossacks" is huge in concept, cast and setting, and, like "The Big Parade," its gigantic effectiveness serves only to accentuate the love theme of the boy and girl that runs through it. Interestingly, too, Renee Adoree is the girl.

A great program of talkies also is being presented on this program, headed by Pat West and his Musical Maddies, "Syncopated Blues Players." A lively orchestra with comedy injected by the rotund Pat West himself. The other talkie act is "In a Blacksmith Shop," one of the finest singing acts on the vitaphone circuit, and is composed of a sextet of soloists featuring J. Delos Jewkes.

CRAWFORD, BROMLEY BACK FROM CAL. TRIP

P. O. Crawford and H. L. Bromley returned Wednesday night from a four-day trip to the Marble mountains in northern California, in company with a party of San Francisco and Yreka business men. The party was the largest that has ever attempted this unusual trip and consisted of 18 members as well as the guides, packers and cook. The first motion pictures ever taken of this scenic wonder were secured by Horace Bromley, Capco cameraman, and scores of photographs were also taken by various members of the party. Virtually the entire trip was made on horseback, as much as 25 miles being covered in one day. Herbert Hoover's summer home is located only a few miles from Sky High lake, where the party
