

KIWANIAN GIVENS TRAVEL TALK BY DR. F. G. THAYER

Kiwanians were taken on a sight-seeing tour of New Orleans today noon by Dr. F. G. Thayer, who recently returned from the south, where he spent the past year doing post graduate work in eye, ear, nose and throat.

"Canal street in the center of the city divides the old and the new as well as customs of the people and appearance of buildings are concerned. On one side of the 150-foot street there is a European city of a hundred years ago reserved for show purposes. Auction blocks where slaves were sold, whipping posts for law breakers, dungeons, iron railings along the streets and old French markets are some of the picturesque things," the doctor said.

Modern buildings and streets distinguish the opposite side of Canal street. "New Orleans at first glance is a foreign country. My wife saw an old Ford decorated with an American flag and she remarked about how nice it was for them to carry it," the speaker related.

"Someone has described the negroes of New Orleans by saying, 'It looks as if all the negroes spent their time sitting around thinking.' After being in the city a while I decided that they were just sitting."

"The population of the southern city is mixed, due to the fact that the French, Spaniards, and finally in 1883, the Americans, have had charge of the government. Many of the people do not speak English. They are at least 50 years behind the times in some respects."

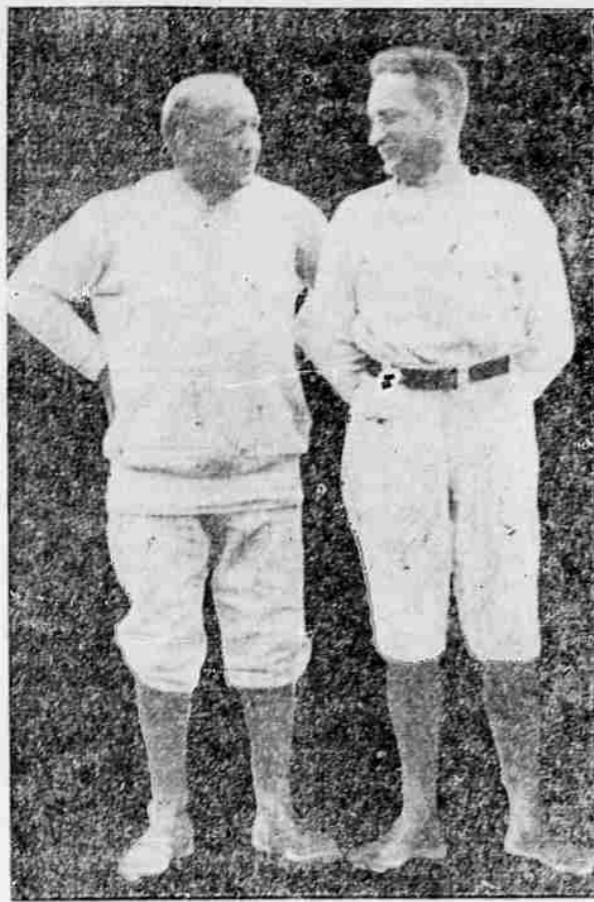

One of the most interesting features of New Orleans is the many travelers, according to Dr. Thayer, is the type of cemeteries used. Because the dirt is extremely low the dead are buried above ground in vaults if they can be afforded. Poor people must lie on shelves in special walls as long as the relatives are able to pay rent. On the home pile they go if payments cease.

Horse racing is the most popular sport in the southern city, some of the programs lasting as long as 100 days. The grandstands are fronted by glass which is raised during the races and lowered between events in order to give the spectators the comfort of steam heat.

Guests at the luncheon today included K. H. Compton of St. Louis and W. J. Marshall of New York City.

The attendance prize, a box of chocolates, was drawn by A. L. Hill.

Coaches Rockne and Schissler Go East to Give Courses in Nebraska

Just Talking Over Prospects.

Schissler, head football and track coach at Oregon State Agricultural college, have completed their fourth annual two-weeks coaching school at the college and have come to Hastings, Nebraska, where they will hold a special coaching school. A handful of the leading college and high school coaches of the west were at Hastings during the first two weeks of the summer session taking the work in football under Rockne and Schissler and in basketball under Coach "Doc" Hayes.

THE GREAT IT OF ITALY HAS NO SUSPENDERS

Mussolini Puts On Ice Cream Pants, Held Up By Belt—Summer Duds Make II Duce Look Young, and Sets Style of Countrymen.

ROME, July 8.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini inaugurated Rome's hot season today, setting the summer fashion for all male Italians.

In England, from time immemorial, the Prince of Wales has given style and tone to his future subjects regardless of whether his choice of garments fits the average Briton's architecture or not.

Italy's heir to the throne, however, has always been too busy with his duties as an army officer to appear often without uniform. It has fallen to the premier to leap into the sea. This is how a "washout" straw hat shaped something like a panama; pale gray silk tie with a showing ruby-colored striped neck matching the gray and ruby; a pale gray silk shirt with soft collar and no vest; a white-crowned, fairly dark blue coat, with a striped handkerchief peering out of the edge of his belt; a pair of trousers of an ice cream hue with cuffs upturned; white shoes with tan leather trimmings.

Premier Mussolini also files in the face of custom by discarding suspenders and wearing a belt. Thus attired, his 45 years seem to fall from his shoulders and his appearance is that of one of the young bloods of 25 who stroll along the Flaminian hill at night.

The chief difference is that the premier has always been wise enough not to sport a white face by the insertion of a moustache in his eye.

It is always careful that all articles of his wardrobe should be "made in Italy."

GOVERNOR SMITH IS STILL TALKING OVER HIS PLANS

ALBANY, N. Y., July 8.—Governor Smith is sleeping on his campaign plans in consultation with others. Although he will have the final say, both as to organization and strategy, he is indicating that he has no preconceived ideas as to what would be done in seeking the advice of various party leaders.

Already he has gone over the situation with some of his closest friends who attended the Hudson convention, and has as his house guest Senator Patterson of Nevada, who served as chairman of the convention platform committee.

Late today the governor looked forward to a chat here with Senator Robinson of Arkansas, his running mate. He had the assurance of Senator Reed of Missouri that he would come east to cooperate in campaign planning. He has arranged to be in New York city Wednesday to take part in the deliberations of the democratic national committee. At that time it is expected that a campaign manager will be named and dates set for the official notification of each of the democratic nominees.

CHAMBERLAIN DEAD

Senator George E. Chamberlain, and many tributes were said for him as a citizen and servant of the people.

The chairman of the military affairs committee of the senate, he made a great record during the World war," said Senator Charles L. McNary. "He was beloved by his fellow members of the senate, was faithful, diligent in his work and ranked high among the members of that body during his 12 years of service.

The state of Oregon has lost a distinguished citizen in the passing of George E. Chamberlain," Governor Patterson said. "He rendered an able and devoted service as governor and his state-ship in the United States senate will win him a national reputation. Oregon owes a great debt to his loyalty and outstanding ability."

BEAR THAT HELD UP LOGGERS IS FINALLY SHOT

TACOMA, July 8.—(AP)—Mr. Deane, who joined the M.C. and two other men, the latter had been on logging operations and kept a dozen men from going into the woods at the Lumber camp, five miles south of Port Orchard, last week, tried to shoot Steve Vlodak, a lumberman, once too often, thereby oversteering game laws which overtake bears' lives in that point where humans are endeavoring.

Vlodak owns a small ranch near the Lumber camp and was awakened at 4 o'clock Saturday night by a noise among his chickens. Dressing partially he went to investigate. It was 7:30 in the morning before he returned to the house. In the meantime he had been spending part of his time in a tree, part on the run dodging around trees, shrubs and stumps, trying to get back to the house, and part of the time in a hand to hand conflict with the biggest brown bear in the party. His eyes and ears attracted the attention of Dick Holloway, a logger. The loggers have been going out on the job since the bear was shot.

Mr. Vlodak and his campers are in the district and one automobile camp was built on the highway by the mother and four other men in the day after the father had been killed. When the auto met with the animal in the road, the car was reversed for a distance and waited until the animal disappeared in the woods.

Lumber loggers, who had been using only three horses, now have five for the job. "The Bear Comes Over the Mountain."
